ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The successful completion of this work is a result of the support, encouragement, and even the direction of many people, both personal and professional. My humble offering to them and their efforts is a heartfelt acknowledgement.

I am deeply indebted to my guide, Dr. (Ms.) Gurpreet Randhawa for her continuous guidance, encouragement, unstinting support, and special expertise and vigilance over the dissertation process. Her insightful suggestions and patience in dealing with my incessant queries went a long way in clearing my doubts. I am greatly indebted for all the hours she has spent in reading my thesis.

My gratitude also extends to Dr. Bikramjit Singh Maan, H.O.D., University Business School, GNDU, who showed faith in me and my project. I also appreciate my teachers in the University Business School whose influence and involvement in my research was a constant source of inspiration. I am also indebted to the staff of Bhai Gurdas Library, GNDU who assisted me in every possible way and resolved all my queries with a courteous smile.

I am also enormously grateful to the employees of food processing companies who willingly participated and give their inputs on sensitive topics of organizational climate and its correlates. Without their willingness this project would have been impossible.

Most of all, I’m deeply grateful for my family that supports me in my work. My husband, Harmeet Singh, you are my lifeline in the storms of life. With you by my side, my life journey is richer and fuller. I am also indebted to my father-in-Law, Sr. Hardev Singh who not only bolstered my courage and hope but also painstakingly took my burden from the starting of this journey to the end. My mother-in-law, Mrs. Amrik Kaur also deserves a mention as she took over the household chores without complaint and constantly encouraged me to devote my time to research.

Thanks are also due to my father, Sr. Gurmej Singh and my mother, Mrs. Jaspinder Kaur, who are the role model of my life. They encouraged me to pursue Ph. D. and with genuine affection, motivated me to complete my research work.

The true mettle of friends comes to the fore in trying times and I came to know and appreciate the genuine concern and steadfastness of my friends, especially Haritika, Manisha and Renu who were with me at every stage of the thesis.

No task can ever be begun or completed without the blessings of the Almighty. Had it not been for His benign sanction, I would not have been able to undertake this project.
