Acknowledgements

If this thesis has evolved in any significant manner from the skeletal proposals that I drafted during the initial years of my research, it owes much to the help, encouragement, as well as the intellectual and emotional companionship of many. Dr. P Thirumal, my supervisor, has been extremely patient in giving me time to grasp concepts and ideas, and has always borne with my jumbled writings all this while. The spirit of camaraderie and intellectual vigor that I was introduced to in him has immensely helped me in this project as well as in my intellectual formation in general. I thank him for being a wonderful supervisor. I also thank Dr. E Sathya Prakash, my co-supervisor, for the suggestions, encouragement, and for always remaining approachable whenever I needed help. I am grateful to all other faculty members and the staff at the Department of Communication, S N School, for their support and encouragement. I will always remember with affection the company of Zamie, Christy, Joya, Ramesh, Bhargav, Jasmine, Machun, Vijaya Bhaskar, Nookaraju and other fellow researchers at the department.

I thank Dr. MT Ansari, my doctoral committee member, for his suggestions and comments, especially for the animated discussions on Neelakkuyil. Prof. Madhava Prasad, Ratheesh Radhakrishnan, Sharmila Sreekumar, Jenny Rowena, S Sanjeev, Ashley Tellis, Sowmya Dechchamma and Aparna Nandakumar have gone through much cruder versions of various chapters in this thesis and suggested changes. The encouraging words from many of them have at times been the only motivating factors. Many thanks to all of them, though I have not been able to do much justice to their suggestions and warnings. I thank the editors and especially the referee at BioScope: South Asian Screen Studies, for their valuable recommendations and detailed comments on a version of the first chapter that I submitted to the journal. I thank Prof. Shasheej Hegde, Prof. Madhava Prasad, and Dr. MT Ansari for letting me audit their courses. I also thank the MA Cultural Studies Batch 2009-10, English and Foreign Languages University, Hyderabad, for the discussion on my paper on Neelakkuyil.

S Kumar, P Ramadas and R Gopalakrishnan found time for discussions with me, which helped me form a perspective on many areas of this project. The librarians and the staff at Jawaharlal Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi, Appan Thampuran Smaraka Library, Thrissur, and the Centre for Development Studies, Thiruvananthapuram, have been extremely helpful and cooperative during my visits to their archives and library. I am grateful to Harilal for letting me stay in his room at CDS, Thiruvananthapuram; Ranjith and Christy for providing me the luxury of staying in their plush home during my visits to Teen Murthi, Delhi; Sharmila for providing shelter during my shuttling between the South and the North. Also, I am indebted to the UGC, New Delhi, for providing me with a JRF/ SRF.

Aparna Nandakumar has always remained the sounding board for my arguments, a constant source of inspiration and has helped a lot in making this thesis readable. I thank her, and Prabha Zacharias, for helping me with the translations. Viju has been kind enough to smuggle hard-to-get films for me from his brother’s collection.

My initiation into academic debates was by listening to a group of young intellectuals, like Sreejith, Hanu, Jenny Rowena, Christy, Ranjith, Bindu KC, Hany Babu, Parthasarathi, Shinaj, James Michael, Shalini, Nuaiman, Ashley Tellis, Arun, Simi, Bhargav, Suresh Peter, etc., engaging in passionate discussions on a wide range of topics. The spirit of intellectual provocation that I was introduced to during those days has been extremely motivating. Without the encouragement and help of many of them I would not have thought of taking up research. The discussions with Jenny and James during the early years of my research have helped me a lot in identifying the questions that this project has taken up. Ratheesh Radhakrishnan has been extremely helpful and affectionate ever since I met him, has borne with my constant pesterings, and has shown considerable patience in going through the drafts.

The five years that I spent in the University of Hyderabad during the course of this project have undoubtedly been the most eventful in my life. I will always cherish the time I spent with Viju, Sreebitha, Salma, Bipin, Nikhila, Mahesh, Praveen, Barath, Harini, Rauf, Shyma, Ambili, Lenny, Bijoy, Saritha, Sreekumar, Jayakrishnan, Shilpaa, Amit, Philos, Prasanna, Prameela, Manila, Sabin, Siji, Nivedita, Robin, Sreeraj, the Samvad team and many others. A special thanks to Shinu and Shibly for the yummiest onasadyas I have ever had.

My parents, my sister Joslin, and my brother Justin have supported me all these years and borne my haphazard lifestyle with equanimity. I sincerely thank them for their love and care, and their unquestioning acceptance of the many random decisions that always marked the course of my life.
