Acknowledgments

This thesis could not have been completed without the support- intellectual, moral and personal of a number of individuals. I would like first to thank Professor Tutun Mukherjee, my dissertation’s supervisor who was a source of support and inspiration. I consider myself very fortunate to have had her for a supervisor. With characteristic expertise, she encouraged my interest in issue of comparative epic study as a proposal submitted to the center for comparative literature. Her trust in my abilities inspired the confidence that was crucial for the long haul. I will always feel grateful to her immense intellectual generosity. I would like also to thank the members of my doctoral committee: Prof. Ramabrahmam and Prof. Muzaffar Ali for the time and effort they put into reading the dissertation, commenting on it and making many fruitful suggestions. I thank Prof. Merchant for his invaluable help on tracking the writing of this Thesis.

I should also thank Mrs. Rajani, Mr. Balaraju and Mr. Srisailam, the kind and helpful staff of CCL.

All that remains is my family. My greatest thanks should go to my parents whose unfailing support and love was a source strength that kept me moving ahead despite the difficulties encountered during the course of this dissertation.

Finally, special thanks should go to my wife who sustained me through out the project in ways no one else could. It is incredibly difficult to find words to convey the deeps of my gratitude for the patience, love and support she gave me over the course of this project.
