ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I profoundly thank the following persons who have helped me in various ways to carry out this investigation:

Dr. P. Rama Rao, Acting Head of the Department of Psychology, University of Madras, for his invaluable guidance, supervision, help and encouragement throughout the investigation.

Dr. T. E. Shanmugham, Professor Emeritus, Department of Psychology, University of Madras, for his help and encouragement during the investigation.

Heads of industrial organizations for granting permissions to carry out this investigation and managers for their co-operation and willing participation as subjects which made this investigation possible.

Dr. Gift Siromony, Mr. K. Chandrasekhar and Mr. M. Chandrasekhar, Department of Statistics, Madras Christian College, Tambaram, Madras for the very valuable help rendered in connection with the statistical analysis and computerisation of data.

Mr. K. N. George, Director, Madras School of Social Work, Madras, for his help and the Board of Management for granting me study leave.

Many executive friends for their valuable help in tiding over some of the difficulties encountered during the investigation.

December, 1981. M. T. PAUL
