"BIBLIOGRAPHY"
A bibliography means booklists, i.e. a list of written sources, either published or unpublished, consulted in the preparation of the report during the course of research, books, periodicals, articles, government documents, unpublished materials, pamphlets, films, radio or television broadcasts, records, lectures, interviews etc. Bibliography may refer to all which have bearing on the dissertation/thesis, irrespective of their being actually referred to or not, in the text. The aim is to permit the reader to find the exact item you consulted. Consequently, there is a standard form. The list of bibliography we used during our study is as follows:
