To be human in real sense is to be humble. To be humble is to regard and recognize others to whom one is heartily indebted. As it is said, darkness labors the whole night to bloom the rose and remains silent to take the daylight her credit. Likewise many well wishers contributed to this work and stepped aside for me to take the credit. But being humble and modest, it becomes my moral duty to acknowledge their share in finalizing this research. My thanks cannot be expressed in words to all those who have helped me to bring this work to completion.

"Words can never convey when the heart is overflowing,
And often those who love the most just have no way of knowing.
Many things the heart conceals and never can impart,
For words seem so inadequate to express what's in the heart."

With immense pleasure through this small note, I wish to express my deep gratitude and indebtedness to the entire faculty of education whose dedicated guidance and constructive criticism helped me to explore with certain sense of direction.
