ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The present work will remain incomplete unless I express my feelings of gratitude towards a number of persons who delightfully co-operated with me in the process of this research-work.

In the light of foregoing, first of all, I would like to acknowledge my indebtedness and deep sense of reverence to my worthy supervisor and guide, Dr. Narendra Kumar, Reader, Department of Commerce, M.D. University, Rohtak. I am thankful to him for his capable guidance, inspiration, ever-willing help and patronizing encouragement. His critical insights and, if I say so, elliptical suggestions, have supplied the foundations of the present work.

I express my deep sense of gratitude to Prof. Ravinder Vinayak, Head of the Department of Commerce, M.D. University, Rohtak, for giving me the permission to take the study. I owe him warm thanks for his encouragement.

Collection of data is always an uphill task. The present study involves 700 respondents. I am deeply indebted to all the respondents for their co-operation for sparing their valuable time to fill up the questionnaires, which helped me in conducting this research. Mr. Killam, the then executive in the Marketing Division of Panjab National Bank deserves special thanks for providing the required information. I am highly indebted to the library staff of Delhi School of Economics, Delhi, University of Delhi and to the library staff of M.D. University, Rohtak for their kind and willingly assistance.

I would like to express a deep debt to my parents whose enthusiasm about my work was a source of constant encouragement, support and personal interest shown by my mother, kept me in high spirits and motivated me to take up the entire assignment more seriously. My husband, who bore with me through my various moments of crisis, made possible the completion of this research work. Special bond of love and respect to him for various troubles and sacrifices that he bestowed painstakingly.

I am short of words to express my unfathomable love and affection to my daughter, 'Aena', whose sacrifice rolled on every page of my thesis and had an indelible imprint in an unforgettable manner. I must appreciate the patience shown by her for bearing with my prolonged absense till the completion of this research work.

Finally, I am obliged to Shri Davinder Kumar, who so willingly and cheerfully typed, edited and arranged this manuscript.
