REFERENCES
REFERENCES

191

Chandra, N. (2002). An analysis of students written explanations about scientific concepts in a computer program designed to support conceptual change. Paper presented at the conference for Language and Science Literacy: Empowering Research and information instruction, University of Toronto, Canada

CIET. (1993). All India Association for Educational Technology, Central Institute of Educational Technology, NCERT.

Couch, J.D. (1993) Interdisciplinary study with Computer Based Multimedia Reports-Research (143) (ERIC Information Services, Washington DC)

Indg.in, http://www.indg.in/health/womenhealth/adolescence

Mahapatra, B.C. (2005). Information Technology and Education: with Special Preference to Importance of Computer in Class by Publisher: Sarup, New Delhi

Rogers, C. (1982). Freedom to learn for the Eighties; Clobus, Charles, E.Merill

Sadiah, B. (2003) Motivational analyses on the effect of different modes of presentation on learning from computer based instruction paper presented at ICASE
2003 World Conference on Science & Technology Education, held in Penang, Malaysia 7-10 April 2003.

Southalabama.edu, http://www.southalabama.edu/coe/bset/johnson/2mcq.htm

Stone, T.T., III (1996). The academic impact of classroom computer usage upon middle-class primary grade level elementary school children. Dissertation Abstracts International, 57/06-A

213

U.S. Department of Education (July 1999): The Secretary’s conference on educational effectiveness of educational technology. 214

