BIBLIOGRAPHY

6. BENSON, Herbert and associates. Tibetan monks’ bodily functions altered at will. USA, Harvard Medical College, 1983.

10. BUE, Erberto Lo. Newar sculptors and Tibetan patrons in the 20\textsuperscript{th} century.

60. LOBSANG Rapgay. Relaxation yoga: a Tibetan way to better health. Tibetan Medicine, series 9, 1984, pp.72.

70. PAREKH, Harsha and SHETH, Tara. Citation patterns of social scientists. In : National Seminar on Social Science Documentation in India, Pune, 1984, pp.88-106.

71. PARTHASARATHY, C.S. Design and installation of management information systems. (Management in Govt. series p.23)

77. RESERBERG, Victor. Use of scientific and technical information in Brazil. Ann Arbor, MI: The University of Michigan, School of library science, 1980. (Unpublished)

83. SATYANARAYANA, R. Categories of users, their information requirements and information gathering habits. In: INSDOC Course material (mimeograph), 1975, pp.1-11.

91. SINGH, S.N. Characteristics of information material as used by the social scientists in India and their implications in the social science documentation in the country. In : National Seminar on Social Science Documentation in India, Pune, 1984.

92. SKELTON, Barbara. Scientists and Social scientists as information users: a comparison of results of science user studies with investigation into information requirements of the social science. Journal of Librarianship, 15 April 1973, pp.138-156

95. STEIG, Margaret F. the information needs of historians. College and Research libraries, 42, 1981, pp.541-545.

100. TUCCI, G. Indo-Tibetica. 7 vols., Rome, 1932-1941.

102. TUCCI, G. To Lhasa and beyond: diary of the expedition to Tibet in the year 1948. Tr. By Garelli Mario, New York, Snow Lions, 1983.

111. WERSIG, G and NEVELING, U. The phenomena of interest to information science, a search for identity, U, New York, Marcel Dekker, 1974, pp. 91-106.

112. WILSON, T.D. and WALSH, C. Information behaviour: an interdisciplinary perspective. Sheffield, University of Sheffield Department of Information Studies, 1996

