ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are no sufficient words to express the deep sense of gratitude to my supervisor Dr. M.H. Qureshi who initiated, inspired and guided me in this endeavour. His constructive suggestions, painstaking corrections of draft and incessant encouragement have enabled me to put hazy thoughts and raw data in this thesis. Dr. M.H. Qureshi constantly provided candid atmosphere and much needed morale boosting which helped me to accomplish this task.

It is my privilege to thank Prof. A. K. Mathur, Chairman, Centre for the Study of Regional Development for providing all the facilities for research and taking keen interest in progress of this work. I am extremely grateful to all the faculty members of CSRD for their valuable suggestions and advice at different stages.

I am highly thankful to Prof. G.S. Bhalla, Dean, School of Social Sciences, for giving constant encouragement and inducement because of which I could complete this work on time.

I am much obliged to Prof. Moonis Raza, Vice-Chancellor, University of Delhi who was kind enough to offer his suggestions at the time of conception which led to the direction of this study.

Special thanks are due to Prof. B.K. Joshi, Giri Institute of Development Studies, Lucknow, Dr. C. Shastri, U.P. Development Systems Corporation, Lucknow, Dr. Shekhar Pathak, Kumaon University, Nainital, Prof. S.L. Shah, Consultant, Planning Commission, Dr. H.K. Singh, Govt. College, Gopeshwar and Dr. Anil Joshi Govt. College, Kotdwara, for extensive discussions on various forest problems of study area.

I was immensely benefitted from the discussions I had with Shri C.P. Bhatt and Shri Sundarlal Bahuguna, Chipko leaders, S/Shri Kamla Ram Nautiyal, Pitambar Joshi and Ghan Shyam Raturi of Uttar Kashi. While they represented peoples' views on forest related problems, the points of view of forest department were put forward by S/Shri S. Chandola, D.F.O. (Civil and Sovam), Uttarkashi, K. Prasad, Conservator of Forest and B.P. Maletta, Conservator (Reserved Forest), Pauri. I thank all of them and to all my respondents for the time they could give.

I will also like to thank Dr. S.P. Garg, Head, Geog. Deptt. and Dr. I.P. Saxena, Principal, D.A.V. College Dehradun for extending their cooperation and granting me study leave. The financial support provided under FIP by UGC, New Delhi is gratefully acknowledged. The facilities provided by the Librarians and staff of JNU, Planning Commission, Central Secretariate and Forest Deptt., Lucknow Libraries have helped me in getting the required literature.

Large number of people have helped in the making of this thesis. The staff of CSRD, SSS and other sections of the University have to be thanked for their timely help. Mr. Chinmoy Nath, and Mr. Hiranmoy Bose of Electra, deserve very special thanks for their contribution in final stages.

It is not possible to thank a large number of friends who have contributed in many ways in generating in me an aptitude for research. It was, however, only because of help and cooperation provided by Satya, Niladri, Mahabeer Thakur and Harbans Gill that I am able to put this work in present form. The homely environment and affectionate support was always forthcoming from Mrs. Najma Hashim, Shahla and Seema.

I fail to convey my feelings to my parents and in-laws who have always been a source of inspiration, affection and emotional support. Most of all I owe the completion of this work to my wife Aradhana who has been at my side at the moments of satisfaction and depression. Our little Nausha also played his role in generating happiness during tensions.

In the end, I must thank Mr. S.D.S. Rawat for preparing neat, excellent and efficient typed manuscript.
