ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Any piece of research work that demands teamwork cannot be possible without the help of others. This thesis has grown to the present shape only due to many scholastic persons and friends, who played an important role during the different stages of the research. I consider it an act of great pleasure to acknowledge them here.

Foremost, I take this opportunity to reserve my feelings of gratefulness and respectful thanks to my research guide Dr. Gopal K. Kadekodi, Professor of Economics and former director, Institute for Social and Economic Change (ISEC), Bangalore, for his excellent guidance, unending generosity, patience and the interest he took through out the course of my work. He gave me the golden opportunity to start, carry on and complete this research work (Which, many of my contemporaries and university friends deem it a big dream to accomplish), ignoring and excusing all my personal limitations and problems. Certainly, he remained kind enough to me by giving concrete suggestions, tireless encouragement and supervising thesis thoroughly through out the course of research work. His valuable guidance, critical comments and scholarly suggestions have greatly helped me in writing this thesis successfully.

I take this opportunity to convey my thanks to the former directors of CMDR, Prof. P R Panchamukhi, and Prof. Sailabala Debi, for their support and encouragement. I take this opportunity, to show my deep sense of gratitude to Prof. G K Karanth, director, CMDR, for his continuous encouragement and support to finish the thesis and special concern to submit the thesis without delay.

During the initial stage of preparation of this thesis, I have been greatly benefited by different people in CMDR as well as in ISEC, Bangalore. In CMDR, I would like to thank Dr. Arabind Mishra (presently with TERI University, New Delhi), and Dr. V B. Annigeri for many discussions and encouragement. I owe a great to Dr. Nayanatara S. Nayak, for her constant encouragement, support and help in various aspects through out the years of my course. I place on record my sincere thanks to Prof. Jean Pierrie Poullier (WHO, Geneva) for helpful discussions. I also got significant advice and suggestions in each stage of my work by Dr. Mihir Kumar Mahapatra, (Assistant Professor, GIM, Goa), and Dr. S. Puttaswamaiah, (Assistant Professor, Bangalore University, Bangalore). I am grateful to them for their invaluable ideas and insights. My association with Rajesh Raj, Associate fellow, CMDR, has always enriched my research work. I deeply admire his constant support and encouragement.

During the days, when Kadekodi sir was the director of ISEC, my constant visits to him, provided a number of opportunities to meet different experts, scholars and PhD students. For this, I remain highly indebted to him, at the same time, I would like to thank Dr. T. V. Sekher, Asst. Professor, Population Research Center, (Presently with the IIPS, Mumbai), Prof. S Madheswaran, Professor of Economics, and Dr. G K. Gayatri Devi of ADRT Unit, despite their busy schedules, spared their valuable time for my work. My sincere thanks are also due to Dr. N Shanta Mohan, Professor of Economics, National Institute of Advanced Studies (NIAS), IISc, Bangalore, for her invaluable research advice and suggestions. My sincere thanks are also due to Professor D. Rajasekhar, Professor and Head, Center for Decentralisation and Development, ISEC, for his kind cooperation during the revision of this draft.

I find no words to express my deep gratitude to my friends, who helped in various ways. In Dharwad, especially, I am grateful to Vijayalaxmi Hegde, for her continued moral support, help, and concern to finish this work. Her involvement along with Kalavati Aparaj and Pavitra Timmapur, especially during the painstaking field surveys in Dharwad, Raichur and Dakshina Kannada districts, was really amazing. Similarly my sincere thanks are also due to my friend Mallesh Siddalingappannavar, for his excellent backing during the field surveys in Dharwad district. I am very indebted to my friend Sadanand Sugandhi, who helped me in locating the field villages in Dharwad as well as in Raichur District. I also reserve my gratefulness to all the respondents and SHG group members in Dharwad, Raichur and Dakshina Kannada districts, without whose cooperation, my field interviews and group discussion were almost impossible.
In Bangalore, Anant, Sukumar, Mahesh, and Rajeev Kunigal, were always kind enough to provide much of their possible. Mainly I am grateful to Anant, who accommodated me during my visits to ISEC and to Sukumar for his timely but valuable help during the submission of the thesis.

I remain obliged to the excellent library support provided by Ms. Jayashree Kulkarni, Ms. Meenaxi Hunagund and Ms. Poornima Kulakarni. They were kind enough to provide invaluable sources and materials needed for the study. It was quite wonderful to visit the Libraries of ISEC, Bangalore and MIDS, Chennai and IIT Madras. I am grateful to the cooperation by the librarians of these institutes, especially to Mr. Venkatesh in ISEC.

Apart from academic assistance, I have been greatly benefited by the technical assistance in CMDR. I sincerely acknowledge the excellent computer assistance provided by Mr. B P. Bagalkot, who despite his busy working hours spared his time for my sake. Similarly Mr. Gururaj H, Jayatheerth, and Mukund provided the needed help. I sincerely acknowledge the administrative support extended by Mr. V T. Hunagund, Mr. A. S. Raichur, and Sameer whose co-operation was indeed vital. I also thank, Mr. D R. Myageri, Dr. A R. Kulkarni, Mahesh Kumar Rathod, Mr. D R. Revankar and Gopal Sarangi, Abhilash Kumar Pradhan and Mahesh E, who helped me in one or other way. It would be incomplete if I overlook the external support rendered by Basu, Krishnaveni, Meti, Sridhar, Ramesh and Bharat, who directly or indirectly helped me whenever I required.

My association with Kadekodi family has been a rare and precious one. I especially remain grateful to Madam Kadekodi and Kamala Hegde for their affection, constant encouragement and continuous advice to complete this research at the earliest possible. In every respect they always with stood me. I respectfully thank them for everything.

Finally, I understand the quality of my relationship and support I have given to my family members, especially after the departure of my farther. Despite this, my mother, brother, Shivu and Akka, remained very cooperative, overlooked my absence and did not question what I was doing but always believed that I will do the right things.
