INTERPRETATION

In quality research, the editing, coding, tabulation and interpretation takes prime role. In the present study, where an ongoing problem has been dealt with a scientific approach, interpretation should have importance in whole of the thesis. Therefore in whole organisation of thesis, interpretation chapter is divided into seven parts viz., Demography and Rescue, Rehabilitation and Reintegration, Prevention and Development, Advocacy and research and Quality of life scale.

In the first part, government policies and programmes have been introduced. Though the policies tailored to the needs for the victims of commercial sexual exploitation for their mainstreaming has been found, the policies close to the concept of mainstreaming has been considered. In the second part i.e., in Demography and Rescue, the demographic factors, conceptual ideas of the respondents about mainstreaming, rescue programme, problem encounter during the rescue operations and support of various policies and legislations have been discussed in various five parts. In the third part, i.e., in Rehabilitation and Reintegration section, the rehabilitation programmes implemented by the NGOs in south India, various problems the NGOs encounter in implementing the programmes and effectiveness of the programme, programmes and policies related to rehabilitation are discussed. In the fourth part, i.e., Prevention and Developmental part, various activities adopted by the NGOs, the problems encountered during implementation of the programmes etc., have been discussed. In the fifth part, since no NGOs have involved in the advocacy and research activities, the gathered information has been put in paragraphs. The study has intended to analyse the quality intervention of NGOs through measuring the quality of life adopted by the mainstreamed survivors in the society. For the same a quality of life scale was adopted, and the same is discussed in the sixth part of the chapter.
