ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am grateful to Prof. Yogendra Singh, my research supervisor, in more ways than one. As a teacher, his emphasis on the need for always going to the classics, his principle that in criticism the opponent should be taken at his best, and his numerous guidances and advices have played an important role in my intellectual development. His appreciations and encouragements have been a source of inspiration, especially during the storm and stress of my theoretically formative period. As a research supervisor, he has been most cooperative, generous, prompt with suggestions and comments, and least interfering in matters of theoretical orientation and levels of judgments.

I am extremely thankful to Prof. Bipan Chandra for the care and interest he has shown in going through and discussing with me in detail an earlier draft of this thesis and for his valuable comments and suggestions for improvement.

It is not possible to mention here the names of the many friends who have played important roles - in various ways and at various levels - in the shaping of some of my ideas on the subject; to name only a few: J. Banaji, D. Banerjee and S.K. Raut.

My special thanks are due to my wife Shami for putting continuous pressure on me to complete the thesis in time, for her kindness and forbearance, and for her many technical helps in the preparation of this thesis.

Bulk of the material for the thesis has been collected, at different stages, at the JNU Central Library, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, Sapru House Library, Central Secretariat Library (all at New Delhi); and the A.S.C.I Library (Hyderabad). I am thankful to the staffs of these libraries for their numerous helps.

Last but not the least, I must thank Mrs Krishna Kumari for her very efficient and neat typing and for her cooperation in finishing it in a very short time.
