ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I should like to express my indebtedness to Prof. T.K. Oommen, my supervisor, for his overall direction, suggestions and relevant criticism which went a long way in the completion of this work. From the beginning to the reading of the final manuscript his interest, encouragement and expert guidance sustained the tempo of the study.

Thanks are also due to Dr. A.D. Taskar, Director, Institute for Research in Medical Statistics (IRMS), ICMR, New Delhi, for providing me the computer facility. I also wish to express my thanks to Mr. N.C. Saxena, Mrs. Sujata Datey, and Mr. Ashok Kumar for their professional expertise in the computerisation of the data.

I am especially grateful for the unstinting help and encouragement that I received from my husband, Prem N. Sharma especially in the expert handling of the statistical work and preparation of the graphs. His unflagging interest has been a tremendous source of inspiration for me throughout the final shaping of this work. I owe a great deal to the loving understanding exhibited by my daughters, Puja, Priya and Palka who had to bear the brunt of neglect and had to share me with this manuscript.

I express my gratitude to the members of the College Governing Body especially, Shri Yashpal Kapoor, the Chairman & Dr. (Mrs.) Sita Srivastava, Principal, Maitreyi College, for facilitating my research endeavour through the provision of the study leave.
I am thankful to Mr. B. L. Vehra, who typed this thesis with great care and interest and whose knowledge of the dissertation style was indispensable.

I also take this opportunity to extend my appreciation to the Principal and the staff of the colleges for facilitating the collection of the data required for this work.

Above all I owe the greatest debt to the college students who furnished the essential human material for this study—without their cooperation the study could not have been made. In the drafting of this report every effort has been made to present the facts of college students' social life and at the same time protect the individuals who supplied the data. The one objective in this necessary phase has been the preservation of the privacy of the persons while at the same time striving to maintain the integrity of the data in its social setting.
