ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

My first appreciation and sincere gratitude goes to my Principal Research Director, Prof. M. Sundara Rao, for his guidance and comments from the inception to the completion of this thesis. I would also like to thank him for respecting and shaping my ideas and for having confidence on me. His daily advice, ‘Don’t waste your time on unnecessary things’, encouraged me to work hard. I would also like to express my gratitude and respect to Prof. M. Prasada Rao, (Joint research Director) for his useful comments and excellent suggestions.

I am grateful to all distinguished faculty members of the department of Economics, especially to the Head of the department, Prof. S.K.V. Suryanarayana Raju, and Chairman, P.G. Board of Studies in Economics, Prof. R. Sudarsana Rao, for their accessibility and kind cooperation on all matters. I am also thankful to members of my doctoral committee, Prof. T. Koteswara Rao and Prof. (Smt.) P. Tara Kumari, for their advice and encouragements.

I am also grateful for comments from my co-scholars at Andhra University, namely Teshome T., Zewdu B., and Addisu M. My heartfelt thanks go to my brothers and friends Tade, Wako, and Mirro, for their prayer and moral support throughout my study. Kebena and Dalasa, thank you for sharing the challenging life of Visag and for supporting me during those days of Sivaji.

Finally, let me praise my parents in my language (and the language they can understand) for all their help, care, prayer, and encouragement throughout my life.
