I take this privilege to express my deep gratitude to those who have been enormously helpful in making this thesis a success. At the very outset, I wish to thank my supervisor, Dr. J.R. Joshi, for his enlightening knowledge and affectionate guidance due to which I could make this research a reality. I would not have been able to imbibe the Aṭṭhakathās and the Ṭīkās sans his kind and patient assistance.

My respect is also paid to Ven. Ho-jin, former Professor in Gyung-ju campus of Dong-guk University (Korea), under whose guidance I first conceived the idea to pursue this study. Professor Ven. Sung-bon of the same Campus was constantly encouraging and inspiring me in many ways. I am indebted to Dr. P.S. Joshi, former Head, Department of Sanskrit, Fergusson College, for imparting Sanskrit grammar to me.

I am very much grateful to Dr. G.U. Thite, the Head of Department of Sanskrit and Prakrit Languages, University of Pune, for providing me with facilities to carry out the present study. The staff members of the library of Pune University, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, the Central Reference Library of Delhi University, also deserve a note of thanks for facilitating me to utilise their resourceful libraries. The Chatthasangāvāna CD-Rom of the Vipassanā Research Institute was of invaluable help throughout my research work.

I am ever so thankful to the Keumo Scholarship Foundation of the Pub-ju monastery (Korea) and other benefactors such as Upāsaka Han-soo Choi, for their financial support to carry out my studies in India.

I deem it to be of paramount importance to salute and honour my most respected Dhamma Ācariya, the Late Ven. Tan-seong, who not only introduced me to the Order of the Blessed One, but also taught me the Dhamma ever since I renounced my home. Ven. Do-gong, Ven. Bo-an, Ven. Sang-deok, Bhikkhunī Seon-o, Bhikkhunī Seon-il, Bhikkhunī Ja-do, and my dearest mother are special individuals to whom I wish to express my gratitude and respect.

I sincerely appreciate Ven. Nivithigala Sumitta for undertaking the proof-reading of this thesis. Last but not the least, I avail this opportunity to thank the Ardham family and all my friends and well-wishers who helped me in multifarious ways during the course of this research work.
