List of Tables and Figures

Tables

Table 1-1: The realization and development for the abandoning/destruction of āsavas in the four Nikāyas 45
Table 1-2: Twelve akusala cittas 53
Table 1-3: The definitions of the three/four āsavas in the commentaries and in the Abhidhammatthavibhāvini-ṭīkā 68
Table 3-1: Different counterparts of nīvaraṇas 181
Table 3-2: The meanings applied to the nīvaraṇas in different literary stages 189
Table 4-1: The classification of ‘samyojanas’ in conjunction with ariyapuggalas 246
Table 4-2: Realisation and development for the abandoning/destruction of ‘samyojanas’ 253
Table 4-3: The transformation of the types of samyojanas in different texts 259
Table 4-4: Etymological accounts of samyojana in the commentaries — the objects that samyojana binds and the objects to which it binds 274
Table 4-5: The conceptual transformation of the general terms into technical concept 278
Table 5-1: The suttas entitled with the term anusaya in the four Nikāyas, and their contents 311
Table 5-2: The relation of the activities of anusayas through the sources of arising in different literary stages. 333
Table 5-3: The ranges of the arising of the seven anusayas by means of sahajāta and ārammanā in the commentaries of the Paṭisambhidāmagga and the Mahāniddesa. 355
Table 5-4: The ‘sources of underlying’ of the seven anusayas in the Yamaka commentary 362
Table 6-1: The relations of the ten tetrads in the group of defilements (kilesapuñja) 432
Table 6-2: The akusala dhammas referred to as kilesas or upakkilesas in different literary stages (from the four Nikāyas upto the sub-canonical texts) 444
Table 6-3: Different counting on ‘diyaddhakilesasahassāni’ in the Dhammasaṅgāni anuṭīkā 455

Figures

Figure 1-1: The nature of āsavas, the relation between āsavas and avijjā, and the application of the fourfold pattern of āsavas 42
Figure 1-2: The arising of āsavas 43
Figure 1-3: The abandoning of āsavas 44
Figure 1-4: The arising of the four āsavas in the twelve akusala cittas 53
Figure 1-5: The limitation (avadhī) of the activities of āsavas applied to the prefix ‘ā’ 62
Figure 1-6: The interdependent arising of avijjā and āsavas 70
Figure 1-7: The interdependent arising of āsavas and avijjā 71
Figure 1-8: The relation between āsavas and avijjā in the circle of samsāra 71
Figure 2-1: The arising of the four upādānas in the twelve akusala cittas

Figure 3-1: The arising of the six nīvarānas in the twelve akusala cittas

Figure 4-1: The types of the living beings bound by ‘samyojanas’ in three existences

Figure 4-2: The arising of ten ‘samyojanas’ in the twelve akusalam cittas

Figure 5-1: The process of the defilements (kāmarāga, etc.) which arise, and their state which lies along with santāna again in the sense of appahīna/thamagata

Figure 5-2: The state of the defilements (i.e. kāmarāga, etc.) which have arisen from mental continuity

Figure 5-3: The state of the defilements (i.e. kāmarāga, etc.) in the form of anusaya

Figure 5-4: The range of the activity of samyojanas and the state of anusayas as depicted in the commentary of the Mahāmalunika-sutta of the Majjhima-nikāya

Figure 5-5: The range of sakkāyaditthi, etc. and “...sānusayā pahīyati”

Figure 6-1: The arising of the ten kilesas in the twelve akusala cittas