ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In preparing this work I am ever indebted to my teacher Dr. R. P. Anand, Professor and Head of the Division of International Legal Studies and Dean, School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University for his invaluable guidance and diligent supervision.

I owe no less a debt to Dr. Rahmatullah Khan, Associate Professor of the Division who supervised and guided the initial stages of this study.

I am grateful to Dr. V. S. Mani, Associate Professor, Division of International Organization, School of International Studies, for his useful criticisms and suggestions.

I am indebted to W. Robert Rangeley, President, International Commission on Irrigation and Drainage; Garg, Secretary, International Commission of Irrigation and Drainage for sharing their expert experience in the field of water resources.

I acknowledge the assistance I received from the libraries of Jawaharlal Nehru University, International Commission on Irrigation and Drainage, Indian Society of International Law, Indian Council of World Affairs, Ministry of Power and Irrigation, Law Commission Library, United Nations Information Centre, Indian Law Institute, United States Information Centre, the Egyptian Information Bureau.

My gratitude goes to Krishinamurthy of Hydro-consult, New Delhi. Besides benefiting from his vast experience in water resources development in Africa, he also gave me access to some important documents otherwise not available. I thank Mr. Snvastava, cartographer, School of International Studies.

I thank Government of India, Ministry of Education and Culture for their financial support under the General Cultural Scholarship Scheme, without which it would not have been possible to carry out this work.

I owe a special debt to His Excellency, Mr. Gurdial Singh, High Commissioner of Uganda to New Delhi for having played selflessly the role of a guardian.

I also thank all my colleagues in the Division, in particular my friend C. J. Jayraj with whom I have shared several experiences.

And, of course, my dear companion Margaret Akoth has played a decisive role. Besides being a driving force keeping me engrossed in study, she undertook the secretarial task including proof reading from the first draft to the final one. Lastly my thanks go to my sister, Mrs Dinah A. Aguang for all the sacrifices she has made to get me educated.
