My very first obligation is to Principal Dr. S. V. Chindhade, my research guide, who has been of immense help to me both academically and emotionally. He has taken keen interest in the work and given valuable suggestions to improve it. Every time whenever I met him, I found him cordial, caring, and considerate. I bothered him time and again about my research, but he put up with me rather smilingly. I would acknowledge my deep sense of gratitude to him for his kind cooperation, supervision, and guidance.

I would put on record my gratefulness to Prof. S. B. Gokhle, Head of the Department of English, University of Pune, Prof. Prashant K. Sinha, and Dr. R. Raj Rao of the same Department for much useful help in regard to my doctoral study.

I owe a great debt of gratitude to my teacher Prof. Fakrul Alam of English Department, University of Dhaka, who introduced me to Nirad Chaudhuri and made me interested in studying him.

Prof. B.S. Naikar, Chairman of the Department of English, Karnataka University, gave me some sources of information germane to this study. I thank him sincerely.

I am beholden to the several authorities in the University of Pune, and I must mention in particular Dr. Ashok Thorat, Dean, Faculty of Arts and Fine Arts, for his sustained interest in my work. I am too, obliged to the authority of Islamic University, Kushtia, Bangladesh for allowing me study leave.

I thankfully mention Dr. Zakaria Rahman, my brother-in-law and esteemed colleague, who took me to Pune University to read for the Ph. D.
My sister, Senior Assistant Judge Mrs. Mamtaz Pervin is an eternal source of my financial and emotional support. My brother Mamun-Ur-Rashid Askari has helped me a good deal in lending his personal computer to me and correcting the proofs. My other two sisters, Shahnaz Pervin and Monira Pervin have rendered yeoman service to facilitate my study. What my little nephews Master Aubhik and Master Arytra have done for me cannot be seen. That may be felt with the heart. I am indebted to them all for innumerable non-routine aids.

I would also like to express my indebtedness to some of my well-wishers, who had been very supportive during my research work. They are: my father-in-law Mr. Mahbub Ali, my mother-in-law Mrs. Farida Khanam, my brothers-in-law Major Farid Mahmud and Sabbir Khan, my other brothers-in-law Md. Enamul Islam and Flight Lieutenant Abu Jafar, and my sister-in-law Dr. Mamtaz Ara Kalpana.

Thanks to Dr. Niranjan Jena, a friend of mine in Pune, who has helped me a lot as to the preparation for the type-script.

Finally, I would mention my wife, Masuma Ferdous Dolon and my son, Arko, who have been a tangible source of my inspiration for the pursuit of Ph. D. degree. I have greatly missed them, deprived them of my company during my stay at Pune University. My relationship with them is past thanks.
