ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

My interest in the subject of disability and the family was sparked off by personal experience. My second son, Vishwas Apratim, affectionately called Vishu, was diagnosed autistic at the age of three. Eight years on, I marvel at the amazing progress he has made in spite of his impairment and the manner in which he has enriched the lives of all those who know and love him. I dedicate this work to all children with autism and those who live and work with them, with the fervent hope that together we can make the world a place that values and respects their unique gifts.

Returning to the research arena after a gap of several years would have been a daunting experience but for the support and guidance of Dr. Nilika Mehrotra, my Research Supervisor. Her patience, calm good humour, thoughtful comments and unfailing positivity sustained me throughout. I would come away from our meetings with my batteries recharged, stimulated with new ideas and armed with books and articles she generously lent. Dr. S.M. Patnaik always boosted my spirits with his kindly concern and words of encouragement.

It would not have been possible for me to complete this work without the support provided by my employer, the Indira Gandhi National Open University, New Delhi. My colleagues at the Regional Services Division and the School of Social Sciences, IGNOU were helpful and supportive. Dr. D.K. Choudhry, displayed a rare empathy and concern for which I shall always be grateful. Dr. C.K. Ghosh made me feel part of the RSD family, even during my Study Leave.

A special word of thanks to my colleagues in the IGNOU Central Library where I spent many happy and fruitful hours. Shri Deshraj Sharma’s helpful, smiling demeanour and the many cups of tea I shared with Dr. Manorama Tripathi were an integral part of the experience!

With much respect and affection, I acknowledge my intellectual debt to my teachers, particularly Fr. Rudi Heredia, S.J., the late Fr. John Macia S.J. and Mrs. Nandini Sardesai from St. Xavier’s College, Bombay.

Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, opened up a whole new world to me. It was here that I forged lasting friendships, met my future husband and interacted with people from every nook and corner of the country and the world. I had the opportunity to learn in the classrooms of Profs. Yogendra Singh, T.K. Oommen, R.K. Jain, Patricia Uberoi, Tiplut Nongbri, Dipankar Gupta. As a Ph.D. scholar, I benefited greatly from my interactions with Profs. Susan Vishvanathan and Maitreyi Chaudhary.

Prof. R.K. Jain, under whose supervision I completed my M.Phil and Prof. Shobhita Jain, formerly at IGNOU, occupy a very special place in my life. They have been pillars of strength and encouragement through my darkest days and have infused me with the confidence to move ahead.
My serendipitous encounter in January 2005 with the anthropologist Prof. Richard Grinker who was conducting his own research in India, gave me a much-needed theoretical push. Thanks, Richard!

Merry Barua, Indu Chaswal and all the other remarkable and dedicated persons at Action for Autism gave generously of their time and permitted me to carry out my fieldwork unfettered.

I express my heartfelt thanks to the families who welcomed me into their lives as one of their own and shared so unreservedly aspects of their lives that must indeed have been painful to recollect. I hope that this work does justice to their lives and experiences, and wish them all the best for the future.

I am lucky to have a circle of friends who share my joys and sorrows and tolerate my eccentricities. Anu, Hema, Eisha, Shubha, Nita, Kanan, Nandini D., Nandini R., Kameshwari, Pema, Suman, Vijaya – Long live the sisterhood! Since V.K. Viswanathan demanded an acknowledgement, he gets one, as does Apratim Barua, who instilled in me the desire to write every single day (barring Sundays and public holidays!)

Dr. Pema Eden Samdup was generous enough to read the work in progress, despite her own academic commitments. My brainstorming sessions with Dr. Eisha Kannadi enriched both me and the telephone company, albeit in different ways!

Ms. Geeta Sharma deserves a vote of thanks for battling with my illegible longhand and preparing a readable text. Needless to say, errors are entirely my own. My ‘right-hand women’, Smt. Kamlesh and Smt. Yashoda helped me keep the home front going. Ms. Yogita took on the responsibility of helping my elder son with his studies as Mummy was too busy with her own!

How do I thank the one I love the best? My son Vibhu Pratyush sportingly put up with my fluctuating moods, pre-occupation, erratic work schedule and terrible food. I swear to make it all up to him, but rather fear that he has given up on me altogether!

Finally, I pay loving tribute to the memory of my late husband, Sandeep K. Singh, my grandparents Kamal and S.S. Vaidya and my parents, Shobhana and Arun Vaidya.
