ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Repayment of academic debt is an impossible task. But its burden at least can be lightened by acknowledging it and by expressing a few words of gratitude. I take this opportunity to express my indebtedness to all my teachers in the Centre for The Study of Law and Governance, JNU.

The preparation of this thesis owes several debts of gratitude to my supervisor Dr Amit Prakash, who despite his busy academic schedule was always there to help me, introduce various new ideas related to my work and stood by me, in spite of all odds. He was constantly motivating me and often enlightened me through his thought provoking suggestions. It would not have been possible for me to accomplish such a Herculean task but for his guidance, inspiration and constant support with patience.

I express my sincere indebtedness to Lt Col Rajesh Tyagi of Red Horn division of Indian Army, Nalbari without whom it wouldn't have been possible to meet the surrendered militants of ULFA and NDFB in the Bhutan ceasefire time of 2003, and the editors of Luit Jyoti (an Assamese weekly from Nalbari that also publishes in Bodo and in Nepali along with Assamese), who have assisted me to the places, specially Indo-Bhutan borders where I could not have imagined to go in late hours. I am also thankful to the two surrendered NDFB cadres who took me to an interior village of Nalbari (Lakhipar) through a difficult terrain, without whom it would not have been possible for me to visit the place. I also thank Professor Anuradha Dutta of Omeo Kumar Das Institute of Social Change and Development, Guwahati for her inspiring and thought provoking suggestions. Professor Tiplut, Noongbri, Professor K.R. Nyyar, Dr Jayati Srivastava and Dr Janaki Abraham of JNU were my constant inspiration who supported me in various ways towards completion of this work.

I am also indebted to the Teen Murty library, IDSA library, CSDS, Women study centre of Delhi University, ISIL library of Delhi, American library of Delhi, NEN library of Guwahati, besides our university library that provide me the most valuable JSTOR link.

I also extend my gratitude to Mr. Rahman, ADC of Baksa, for providing me the necessary information on Nalbari as well as of Tamulpur. Without the assistance by TAGS guest house at Tamulpur and the two local women with whom I stayed several days, it would have been difficult for me to continue this study.

I would also like to thank Saurabh for his consistent support and encouragement throughout my hard times. I would also thank Navita, Jha sir, Biswajit, Arunibala, Alankar, Menaka, Poornima, Seraj, Mahi and others who helped me in several ways in carrying out my research work.

Last but not the least, my parents and sister Subhamitra, who have always stood by me against all odds, deserve every credit for this work. However, any kinds of mistake on this piece of writing will be entirely mine.

Date 21.8.2008
Jawaharlal Nehru University
New Delhi

(Sanghamitra Choudhury)