ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This thesis is my long awaited dream. It is an ambition, a destination where I always wanted to reach. The journey has been enriching, enlightening and intellectually stimulating. It has expanded my horizons of knowledge of research in Sociology in general and Women’s Studies in particular. There have been several hands that I held while walking on the difficult and challenging path of this journey. I am obliged to each one of them.

First of all I would whole heartedly like to thank Dr. Veena Poonacha, my guide and Director of Research Centre for Women’s Studies (RCWS) at SNDT Women’s University. She is been one of the most supportive, considerate, meticulous and approachable guide. Every word of this thesis has been read, re-read, corrected under her able supervision. I owe a lot to her.

During this entire journey, I was actually guided by two people. One, my official guide Dr. Poonacha, and the other was Dr. Indra Munshi, former Professor from Department of Sociology, Mumbai University. She has been like a co-guide for the thesis and the first reader of my every single chapter. I acquired the initial lessons of research and academic writing from her. She has been the motivational force behind this work.

The very seed of this research had been sown during a discussion with Late Dr. Neera Desai, my inspiration and the pioneer of Women’s Studies in India. Later the research area was shaped with the support of Dr. Vibhuti Patel, a senior academician at SNDT Women’s University and an activist. I am grateful to both of them. I am sure Neeraben would have been very happy to see this thesis and must be blessing me from wherever she is.

The underpinning force of this research is Dr. Trupti Shah, economist and founder of Sahiyar- Stree Sangathan at Vadodara. Entry into the field and every single step of the field work was possible only because of her support. She was like a constant source of information and updates in the area. Sahiyar was like a second home for me during my stay at Vadodara. This research is indebted to them.

If Sahiyar was my second home at Vadodara, RCWS has been one in Mumbai for last five years. The teaching and non-teaching staff, including the library staff have constantly supported me, helped me and made my journey pleasant. For all the formalities, paper work and other technical glitches Department of Sociology, at the SNDT has been very supportive. I thank one and all in the Department.

I am blessed to belong to the Department of Sociology at Mithibai College. It is the place where my heart is. My department and colleagues who are more like my friends and are the reason behind my finishing the work in a given stipulated time. Sharing of work and caring for each other’s success has been the motto of this department. Other colleagues at Mithibai College have also been very encouraging, understanding and helpful. A special mention here should be of Dr. Anuya Warty from Department of Politics at Mithibai College. Her able and razor sharp eye caught every single error in the thesis while proof-reading. Many thanks to her.

I would also like to take the opportunity to thank all the staff members of libraries at Mumbai and Gujarat, RCWS, Mithibai College (Ms. Archana Garate), Jawaharlal Nehru Library (Mumbai University), SNDT University (Juhu and Churchgate), Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Indian Institute of Population Studies, Hansa Mehta library (M.S.University) Women’s Research Centre (M.S.University), Population Research Centre (M.S.University), VACHA, Akshara, Centre for Education and Documentation, Farbus Gujarati Sabha, Olakh and CHETNA. Their efficiency and help enriched my research.

The field research is entirely indebted to the respondents and participants at Vadodara. They are the core of my work. Special thanks to the NGOs like Sahiyar at Vadodara and CHETNA at Ahmedabad for their special interest in my work. I am also thankful to all the medical, legal and government officials, academicians and marriage bureau owners who participated in the research.

On a personal front, family, both immediate and extended at Mumbai and Vadodara, has been very motivating throughout the journey. Especially my family at Vadodara, without whom this research would not have been possible. I am grateful to them for their keen interest in my work and the immeasurable efforts that they have put in to make my field work successful.

Last but not the least thanks to two pillars of my strength, Ilaben and Hiral who have been there with me through the ups and downs of this journey.
