Acknowledgements

My greatest acknowledgement is for my supervisor, Prof. Varun Sahni who has taken keen interest in the subject and has guided me with tremendous patience. His deep understanding of the discipline of international relations has helped me situate this interdisciplinary study in the framework of International Relations. I am extremely thankful to him for his valuable insights and suggestions. My sincere gratitude for his tremendous support and encouragement to me at different stages of work.

I am also deeply thankful to Prof. Surjit Mansingh, under whose supervision this study was conceived. I greatly appreciate the keen interest she continues to evince in my work and for her comments. I gratefully acknowledge the guidance and support of the faculty of CIPOD over these years.

I am extremely thankful to Prof. Will Kymlicka for supervising my work and enhancing my understanding of the subject of this thesis during the field-research at the Queens University as a Commonwealth Visiting Scholar.

I have benefitted greatly from discussions regarding the practical realization of human rights with Maja Daruwala, Executive Director of Commonwealth Human Rights Initiative, New Delhi and thank her for it.

I am thankful to the Indian Council for Social Science Research, New Delhi for awarding me the doctoral scholarship to undertake research relating to my thesis and to the International Council for Canadian Studies, Ottawa for awarding me the Commonwealth research grant to undertake a one-year field study at Queens University, Kingston.

Thanks are also due to the following libraries and their staff for their kind cooperation during my research work: Jawaharlal Nehru University, Institute of Defense Studies and Analysis, Nehru Memorial Library (Teen Murti), Indian Social Institute, Vidyajyoti College of Theology, Delhi University, UNDP and Queens University.

I thank Dr. Umakant, Smita Patil and Ginu Zachariah for being valuable resource persons and for facilitating my interaction with activists and scholars working in the area of minority rights.

I am greatly indebted to Professors Madhu and Anand Bhalla, Gretha Kostwinder and Dr. Joep Toebosch and Sue Donaldson and Prof. Kymlicka, for their kindness, hospitality and support during these years. I thank all my friends, specially Govind, Abanti, Aditi and Bhartendu for standing by me through all these years and for making this an enjoyable endeavour. Special thanks to Aditi, Prerana and Monalisa for proof-reading this thesis.

The love and encouragement of my family and relatives have reinforced my faith in my endeavours. Aai-Baba, Anjani-Venkat and Amit have been the greatest support for me and have given me the courage and conviction to continue my work. They have shared my dreams and joys and have lived each day of these years with me. This work is as much theirs as mine. What I owe them is beyond words.
