Acknowledgements

This research would never have been brought to fruition without the support, love, and encouragement provided by many people. Dr. Harini Nagendra, who has always been there to provide unwavering support, guidance, and for believing in me even when I would falter. My committee members Dr. Gladwin Joseph and Dr. Siddhartha Krishnan, whom I can always count on for mentoring as well as for encouraging me to think out of the box. Many thanks are due to Manjunatha B, whose vast contextual field based knowledge of the city has been invaluable during the course of this research. I thank another invaluable colleague Seema Mundoli, both for providing snippets of archival information used to justify some of my arguments, as well as for reading through some of my rough initial drafts.

My research was enabled through the very valuable USAID PEER Grant awarded to Dr. Harini Nagendra and an equally important institutional fellowship offered by Ashoka Trust for Research in Ecology and the Environment (ATREE). I would also like to thank the Karnataka State Archives in Bengaluru, the Divisional Archives in Mysuru, and the India Office of the British Library in London, the Mythic Society, Bengaluru, and the Survey of India’s regional office in Bengaluru for having given me generous access to data available in their repositories. I also thank the various nodal agencies of Bengaluru – the Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP), the Bangalore Development Authority (BDA), the Lake Development Authority (LDA), and the Karnataka State Forest Department for having granted me permission to conduct this research around lakes falling under their jurisdiction.

In addition to having access to rich data, I have also benefited greatly through my interactions with the Stockholm Resilience Center as part of an exchange program. I sincerely thank Dr. Maria Tengö, Maria Schewenius, Dr. Thomas Elmqvist, Johan Enqvist, and my other colleagues there for having spared valuable time in critiquing and encouraging my research. Thanks are also due to
Dr. Smriti Srinivas, Dr. Mahesh Rangarajan, and Dr. Meera Iyer for having given me extremely valuable inputs on improving my research. Sincere thanks also to Sabrina Jathanha for having provided valuable input on my many chapter drafts.

Encouragement and support I received at ATREE too went a long way in enabling this research. The rich course work and subsequent interactions with my seniors and peers here went a long way in shaping my research questions. My grateful thanks to Dr. Aravind Madhyastha for all the support I have received over the years from him. My thanks to my friends Madhushree Munsi, Madhuri Ramesh, Shivani Agarwal, and Sreerupa Sen for patiently reading through my many drafts and taking time off from their own research to answer my often inane questions pertaining to map-making!

I also wish to express my gratitude to Dr. Nitin Rai and Madhavi Latha for all the Academy support they have been providing. I am also grateful to all my friends and colleagues here at ATREE for having encouraged, supported, and having provided many light hearted moments to cherish in the coming years. My sincere gratitude also to Manipal University, Manipal for having enabled my research towards this degree.

Last but not the least, I owe a wealth of gratitude to my family – my parents, uncle, and in-laws for whole heartedly encouraging me, and my husband Arun for inspiring me to push beyond my limits and give my best. Thank you one, thank you all!
