Acknowledgements

I express my utmost gratitude to my supervisor, Prof. Gulshan Dietl whose valuable guidance and encouragement made this work possible. I am deeply indebted to her for providing me the freedom to express my views without fear or doubt. Her valuable advice and suggestions have greatly helped me in completing the dissertation.

The Sasakawa Young Leaders Fellowship Fund (SYLFF) provided by the Tokyo Foundation and the Nippon Foundation was of much financial help for my research work especially during the field-trip to Oman in June 2009.

I am grateful to the chairperson and all the teachers in the Centre for West Asian Studies for their kind help and co-operation. Discussions with Prof. A. K. Ramakrishnan convinced me about the need to place Oman in the world-system debate. Dr. M. H. Ilias, Associate Professor at the Indo-Arab Cultural Studies Centre at Jamia Millia Islamia University, New Delhi, introduced me to the broad, diverse and dynamic area of Indian Ocean Studies.

I am grateful to Prof. Calvin Allen, whom I had the good fortune to meet in person during the trip to Oman, for drawing my attention to the Persian Gulf Administration Reports.

The staff of both the Maharashtra State Archives at Mumbai and the Oman Studies Centre, at Sultan Qaboos University in Oman have been very friendly and co-operative when I visited these locations for material collection. At the Maharashtra State Archives I would like to especially thank the archivist, P. D. Thombare and Vishwanath Bimble. Dr. S. V. Khandewale of the Indian Council for Social Science Research (ICSSR) was very helpful in arranging the ICSSR guesthouse for my stay in Mumbai during my two visits there in November 2007 and April 2009 for using the Maharashtra State Archives.

I express my gratitude to Mr. Vimal Purecha of Ratansi Purshottam & Co. for his hospitality during my visit to Oman and for sharing his views on the Indian merchant community of Muscat. I would like to thank James chettan and Shibu chettan for accommodating me during my stay in Oman and taking me around to various locations for the purpose of my research. During a trip from Muscat to Salalah undertaken thirteen years ago, Gangadharan uncle showed me that there was much more to Oman than what I had seen or experienced during my childhood days in the country in an ordered and protected environment which was consequently limiting in awareness about the larger socio-cultural setting. I am indebted to him for creating a fascination and interest towards Oman. Abdul Rahman and Sudhakaran uncle provided much assistance during my trip to Oman.

Chhaya Goswami has been of great help especially for my field-trip to Oman by providing information on the locations where material would be available. Anas and Priyamvada have been very kind in allowing access to the material in their possession pertaining to world-systems and British imperialism in the Gulf respectively. My friends Asif Shuja, Rakesh and Basil K. Philip provided much needed assistance towards the end of the submission of the thesis. Good friends are indispensable in an academic environment as many hours of discussion and debate help in the formulation of one’s own thoughts and ideas. Vinod Kumar, Eldho Mathews, Leela Ajay, Kallool, Jaffar Ali, Faisal, Abhilash, Nijeesh, Divya, Biju, Sudhip, Ajay, Rajeesh, Zubair, Ayub, Lirar, Mehmood, Sayyid Alawi, Nousal, Stanley, Rajasimman and Abhilash Thadathil have provided encouragement and support all along.

My teachers during graduation Dr. N. J. Francis and George Alex have created in me the passion for history which ultimately inspired me to do research on Oman’s nineteenth century history.

I would like to thank my parents for inspiring me to go ahead and achieve my dreams. My brother Shinto provided me with strength and encouragement.

This work would not have been possible without the emotional support of my wife Deepthi and the love of my son John. They have had to bear with my long absences from home. In a situation where the conventional trend is to complete professional courses in management or information technology and land up in a lucrative career in a relatively short period of time, Deepthi has constantly re-affirmed my faith in what I was doing. This has been doubly hard for her considering the amount of time required for completing the work and that there is no guarantee of a secure academic profession at the end of it all.
