CONTENTS

1. INTRODUCTION 1-11

2. CHAPTER I
   Cut Down to Size: Oman under Thuwaini bin Said and Salim bin Thuwaini (1856-1868) 12-51
   Introduction 12
   The Situation in the Gulf and the Makran Coast 13-15
   Dispute between Muscat and Zanzibar 15-24
   The Capture and Release of Turki bin Said 24-26
   The Campaign against the Wahhabis and the Assassination of Thuwaini bin Said 26-31
   Muscat under Salim bin Thuwaini 32-36
   The Ibadi Conservative Alliance against Salim 37-40
   The East African Slave Trade, the Commercial Networks of the Bani Hirth and Quasi-Independent Status of Sur 40-50
   Conclusion 50-51

3. CHAPTER II
   A Brief Interlude at Muscat Followed by Greater Dependence on British Protection: The Imamate of Azzan bin Qays and the Early Years of Turki Bin Said’s Rule (1868-1873) 52-90
   Introduction 52
   Politics and External Relations under Azzan’s Imamate 53-67
   The Imamate Administration and its Impact on Society 67-73
   Turki’s Failed Foray Against Azzan and Final Capture of Muscat 73-85
4. CHAPTER-III

Tribal Opposition against the Sultans of Muscat: Oman under Turki bin Said and Faisal bin Turki (1874-1900)
Introduction
The Return of Abdul Aziz bin Said and his Regency at Muscat
Tribal Rebellions against Turki after 1875 (1876-1888)
Oman under Faisal bin Turki
Omani Non-State Tribal Networks towards the end of the Nineteenth Century: Their Continuing Interest in Zanzibar and their Attempts to Gain External Support
Conclusion

5. CHAPTER-IV

The Nature of British Imperialist Influence in Oman
Introduction
Britain’s Early Engagements with Oman
The British Administrative System in the Gulf and East Africa
British Policy towards the Rulers of Muscat (1856-1900)
Heightened French Involvement in Omani Affairs during the Late Nineteenth Century
The Role of India in Britain’s Imperialist Policy in the Gulf
Conclusion

6. CHAPTER-V

The Particulars of an Entrepôt Economy: Trade and Commerce in Oman at the End of the Age of Oriental Globalisation
Introduction