Bibliography

Knowledge Sharing

Trudell, Libby. 4 steps to creating a knowledge sharing plan. Information Outlook. Vol 10(9), pp 27-30.

Library Cooperation

Tornudd, Elin. Cooperation in Library and Information Service- The Role of International

Knowledge Acquisition

Gaines, Brian R. Organisational knowledge acquisition. In Holsapple, Clyde. W., Ed.

Knowledge Tools & Technology

Carzaniga, A., Rutherford, M.J. and Wolf, A.L. A Routing Scheme for Content-based Retrieval”. Information Retrieval, 6(1), January 2003, pp. 21-47(27)

Knowledge Resources & Services

Chen, H. The Terrorism Knowledge Portal: Advanced Methodologies for Collecting and

Wang, F. & Wedman, J. A Case-based Reasoning Knowledge Repository to Support the Technology Integration Community. In D. Lassner & C. McNaught (Eds.), Proceedings

Social Software

Edwards, Philip M. Blogging and RSS : a Librarian’s guide. Journal of the American

Masao Chira et. al. Supporting knowledge collaboration using social networks in a large-scale online community of software development projects. 12th Asia-Pacific

Library Networks

Khanna, J. K. Handbook of Library information systems and services: a study of networks in India, U.K. and U.S.A.

Knowledge Networking

Savage, C. M. 5th Generation Management: Co-creating through Virtual Enterprising,

Vol 8, 1998. pp 29-32

Skyrme, David J. Knowledge networking: creating the collaborative enterprise. Oxford:

Stone, Diana and Maxwell, Simon, Eds. Global knowledge networks and international Swan, William et. Al. Viewing the corporate community as a knowledge Network.

The toxic terabyte: how data dumping threatens business efficiency. IBM Global Technology
1. Is it possible to convert present Library Networks into Knowledge Networks. And if yes, how much time it will take and what would be the expense involved?

2. Most of the staff working in libraries are not knowledge based workers. Can they handle knowledge with these qualifications and experience?

3. If Knowledge Centres are established outside the library stream and they become part of Knowledge Networks, what will be their impact on existing libraries?