ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A large number of people have helped to make this work possible from its inception as an idea to its present form.

First and foremost comes Prof. Dawa Norbu, my supervisor, who helped to steer me in the right direction avoiding wrong turns and dead ends. His resolute support, confidence in my abilities and his invaluable encouragement throughout the various stages of this work has been more than I can possibly let him know. In particular, he stimulated my interest in the history and politics of Central Asia. In his unobtrusive and unassuming way, Dawa has made an incomparable contribution, much more than his humility would permit him to admit, to my evolution as a researcher. I am truly grateful to him.

My research training has also benefited immeasurably from the excellent teaching of Prof. Satish Kumar, who initiated me into the nuances of foreign policy making and implementation as my M.Phil supervisor. Thanks are also due to Prof. O.P. Bakshi and Dr. Anuradha Chenoy of School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University for their encouragement and support.

I am also thankful to the librarians and staff of Jawaharlal Nehru University, National Archives, Institute of Defense Studies and Analysis,
New Delhi for extending sincere assistance during the course of this work.

Thanks are also due to Baboo, Benoo, Mini, Randhir, and Anupam who supported in their own ways from my school days to the present.

Among my university mates, I would like to thank Atul, Shammi, Bindu, Kishore, Mishra, Satish, Kanchan, Balbant, Munindra, Mohinder, Rajesh, Bhushan, and Abhishek. Among other friends, I thank Damayanti and Kiran for their support in many ways, I am also thankful to Chris for drawing maps of Tibet and Afghanistan.

Among friends, I think above all Tiken and Kuhak. Few are privileged to have friends as loving as them. I am also indebted to Pradeep and Dhananjay for their invaluable support at crucial times.

I am pleased to acknowledge Kalzang who exposed me to many facets of life beyond academics. Kunzang deserves a special mention for her concern towards me.

Among my Tibetan friends I am particularly indebted to D’chen Wangmo who not only remains concerned about me in more ways than one but has also contributed to my intellectual understanding of Tibetan social life.
My thanks are also due to Munna, Pramila, Sunil, Kumud and Gautam for their encouragement and love.

Finally, I fondly appreciate Kala for her wonderful presence..

Madan, Devi and Kamla did fine and accurate work in typing the manuscript. Mrs. T. Kameswari Viswanadham deserves a special thanks for the final typesetting. Needless to say, whereas the above mentioned people are responsible for much of what may be good about this work, none is to be held accountable for its errors and shortcomings. They are mine alone.
