ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In the era of 'new economy' this work on the manufacturing sector could raise a few eyebrows. My belief that 'production of commodities' can only be done by 'commodities' and not by services has been the energy behind this work. In the course of this work, I have received considerable help from a number of people. I thank all of them without implicating for any errors and omissions of mine.

I consider myself to be fortunate for this wonderful opportunity to work with Prof. Pulapre Balakrishnan and Dr. K. Pushpangadan. My ideas evolved over a period of time with my constant interactions with them, while assisting in their work on Total Factor Productivity Growth in Indian Industry. Their contributions to the TFPG debate has been my inspiration throughout. In every discussion of ours they planted the unconscious seeds for this work. Both of them emphasised on economic theory, refinements in methodology and stressed on the quality of data in doing empirical research providing me new opportunities to learn.

My supervisor Dr. Pushpangadan has always been a source of encouragement for me, I thank him for the countless discussions we had in the course of this work our meetings were always an avenue for stimulation and generation of new ideas. I am grateful to him for patiently listening to my half-baked ideas and providing an opportunity to try it out whenever possible. My interaction with him is something which I would always cherish.

Though not my formal supervisor Prof. Pulapre Balakrishnan helped me through out the course of this work. Words can't express my gratitude towards him for the innumerable discussions we had and for painstakingly going through my drafts. Every discussion with him on issues in Indian industry and economy has been insightful and a remarkable learning experience for me. In spite of his high mobility without barriers and busy commitments he always spared time for me to help me out whenever I was floundering that distance does not matter. In this work I make no pretence of meeting his own exacting standards but hope to accomplish it one day.

Professors K.K Subramanian and K.P Kannan supported me in all my endeavours. Though he might have forgotten, it was those stimulating lectures by Prof. K.K that motivated me to take up research on issues regarding the industrial sector. His guidance and encouragement has kept me going. Prof. Kannan taught me the importance of placing arguments logically. He always cautioned me of 'getting too much muddled with the numbers' and often asked me to go behind the numbers to bring out nuances.

I thank Prof. Chandan Mukherjee, Director Centre for Development Studies for all the help rendered throughout my stay. Unhesitantly he helped me not only with the procurement of data but also in its analysis. Prof. S. N Rao Ph.D. Programme Coordinator was of great help for me throughout. His gentle prods was something which I always looked forward to. I also thank the CDS authorities for providing me this opportunity to do research in this Centre of learning with the great legacy of Prof. Raj. The late professors P.G.K. Panicker and T. N. Krishnan used to encourage my work at an early stage. I remember them with reverence.

My teachers at CDS literally saw me growing up. D Narayana's friendly queries about the work and his reminders on the importance of time management served as checks whenever I was lavish with time. I thank Mohanam Pillai for his encouragement and interest shown towards my work. I learned from the academic community of CDS the importance of being an academic. I thank Prof. P. S. George, John Kurien, N. Shanta, Michael Tharakan, Thomas Isaac, S. I. Rajan, Achin Chakraborty, K. Navaneetham, V. Santhakumar, Indrani Chakraborty, Pradeep Panda, U. S. Misra, S. Omkarnath, Chinmappan Gaper and Vikas Rawal for their interest in my work and the informal encounters.

K. J Joseph always welcomed me whenever I approached him. Sunil Mani was kind enough to share his views on Indian Industry. I thank both of them for all the help. Joseph always encouraged me to look critically at the 'well accepted views'. The affection and support of Mridul Eapen is something which I would miss. I could always
During the courses of work I had the opportunity to meet some of the renowned economists of my times. The kindness they showed to listen to my thoughts and arguments is something which I would remember throughout. Without discrediting them for the flaws if any which are entirely my own I wish to thank Professors K. L Krishna, U. Sankar, T. N. Sreemivasan, Prabhat Patnaik and Anil Bhaduri for sparing their valuable time. Prof. K. L Krishna has always been a source of strength for us throughout our works on TFDG. I also thank Prof. B. N. Goldar, Vivek Srivastava and Rakesh Basant for discussions at an early stage of this work. The useful discussions with Dr. C. P. Chandrasekhar, Dr. Sanjay Kathuria, Dr. Rajendra Vaidya, Dr. R. Nagajy and Dr. Nandakumar at various stages of work help me in clarifying the issues. I also thank Prof. K. K. George, Prof. M. K. Sukumaran Nair and Raman Mahadevan for their encouragement.

I thank Prof. Kalro, Director, IIM-Kozhikode, for providing me access to their infrastructure whenever I approached. I also thank Prof. Vikas Chitre, Director Sokhale Institute for providing me enough time to complete this work before my next assignment.

I wish to thank the Manager, Canara Bank for providing me a student loan which helped in the final stages of my stay.

The much needed support from the CDS administration made things easier for me. My special thanks are to Mr. Phil Roy for all the help. His timely help with the official matters took much trouble out of me. I also thank Sreekumari, Geetha, Celine and Radhamony for helping with official formalities. Mr. Soman Nair was always willing to sort out official matters. Special thanks for Ramesh, Rajhuvan Panicker, Sathy, Chandra, Padma and Aniradhan for their help in dealing with matters relating to finances.

CDS library has always amazed me and made me think that knowledge production industry is the one with maximum product differentiation. I could always get the references and needed materials from this wonderful library, which was mainly due to the help of library staff. Mrs. Sobhana Kaman at the counter showed that it is pleasant to deal with books. I thank her for all the help without which I would have drowned in the big collection of books. I also thank Sosamma Kurien, Ameer, Anitha, Ancy, Gopakumar, Sankar, Joseph Kurien, Usha, Sunil, Chidambaram Pillai, Sathy, Krishnan Kutty and Thangappan for all the help. The Chief librarian Mr. Ramakrishnan helped me whenever I approached. Mr. Anil Kumar in the library was always there for me for any help regarding data. His interest in building up the database of CDS will always be remembered by the students.

At the computer centre, Murali, Sujana and Chandrika helped me whenever I faced problems. Mr. K. Muraleedhvaran, D. Srija, Krishnan Kutty, Lekha and Seervargheese helped me out of situations. I also thank Bahadur, Gopidas, Sadhasivan, Mohan, Vijayan and Sampan for their friendly enquiries about my life and stay at CDS.

I thank SEWA for the nice food they served through out my stay.

From a world of ‘barriers’ and production functions I could always take time out with my friends. They showed that there exists a world without barriers, a world of friendship where relations are not production relations. I am not attempting to thank all of them individually, because I am sure I will fail in the attempt. My friends Baskar, Sanjith, Dennis, Hari Kurup and Jayachandran always stood by me. Academic and non-academic matters were shared with the common denominator of affection. I could always share my thoughts with Azeez and Veeramani. I thank them for the nice moments we had.

My debt of gratitude for Anil, Hari, Azeez and Parameswaran is beyond words. The help they rendered to see the final product really added value to the gross output.
Senior colleagues, Rammohan, Harilal, Ravi Raman, Pyarelal, Christopher Das, Kabeer, Saikat, Anand Raj, Kesab Das, and KS James, always encouraged me. Rammohan always opened up new topics and ideas to our sessions. The affection and warmth of Ravi Raman and the motivation of Harilal has been invaluable. I had the opportunity to interact with a number of researchers during my stay at CDS. The collegiality and camaraderie I enjoyed will be missed. I thank my colleagues, Baskar, Sanjith, Dennis, Hari Kurup, Meena, Sunny, Darly, M.R Anand, Antonyto Paul, Murugan, Reddy, Deepita, Madhuri, Veeramani, Azeez, Umakrishnan, Lekha, Pinaki, Deepa Sankar, Binoy, Babu, Neetha, Parameswaran, Hari, Rajesh, Venkatesh, Venkatesanarayanan for the nice company they offered me. I could always bank on Murugan and Antonyto Paul for advices and suggestions.

During my stay at CDS I could see new generation of researchers. My opportunity to meet these young students is an experience. Space constraints limit me from mentioning them individually. The current batch of students provided me an opportunity to try out my ideas by patiently listening to me. I thank Subrata, Arasu, Pradeep, Ranjan, Rathikanth, Saji, Ann, Soujanya, Kamna and Sharmista. The company of the trio Ann, Soujanya and Kamna made the last phase of my campus life more joyful. I also thank Shabeer, Reji, Kiran, Balaji, Sai, Rakhee, Poornima, Tina and Indu for their friendly company.

My stay in the campus was made lively by my hostel friends. I owe George Kutty, Sam, Prabhakaran, Rajesh, Suresh, Rebhukumar, Ajith and Anil for the nice moments I had during my stay. The Computer experts Rajesh, Anil and Georgekutty always helped me with the machine. I could always disturb Rajesh at odd hours.

My friends outside CDS always showed keen interest in my work, especially Babichayan, Sudhakaran, Shaji Francis, Vinod, Santhapparaj, Jayakumar, Tony, N. C Narayanan, Jojo, Prasad, Emmanuel, Veeraputhran, Jom, Salam, Albin, Shaktivel and Abraham. Their queries about my work kept me on the toes. Families of my friends provided great hospitality, especially Anju, Meera, Deepa and Sheeja. Their cohort of kids I am sure is to witness competition. During my stay away from home, a number of families provided me the atmosphere which I missed. I thank Dr. Leena Pushpangadan and Padma Subramanian for their warmth and hospitality.

Shobha chechi always provided me the home away from home. The time I spent with Divya, Dileep and the family, undoubtedly was one of the best times in my life. I used to look forward to our family gathering to unwind my grind.

The affection of P.K. Mukundan, Santhi Mukundan, Vini and Vivek is something which I always remember. Uncle Warrier and Aunty encouraged me in all my endeavours.

My family is my source of strength. The integrity of the lives of my parents Janardhanan and Rukmini is something which I have always admired. They never complained of my absence from home for long durations. My sister Sujatha, brother-in-law Sasidharan and the little ones Jayasankar and Jayakrishnan showered me with love whenever I went home. My parents, my first teachers have constantly encouraged my academic pursuits and all endeavours. I hope I would be able to keep the values they have inherited to me.

Finally, to be in this interesting times of changes in economy, polity, society and environment are a fortune. I thank the Almighty for this.
