Acknowledgement

I wish to express my heartiest gratitude to the people who always helped me go ahead to complete my research work. Infact, any research work needs great effort, beginning from the data collection, survey work to the final status of the work – making it real and presentable.

First and foremost, I like to show my profound gratitude to my respected guide - Dr. Ratna Bandyopadhyay. Her encouragement, skilfull and active participation, analysis of the whole raw data and finally her myriads of suggestions and advice in giving it an ultimate shape are, indeed, unparalleled.

I also wish to show my thankful gratitude to the University Librarian, University of Calcutta, Dr. Soumitra Sarkar- whose kind permission, valuable suggestions in different aspects, especially during collection of data and survey work throughout its campuses and departments including the Central Library and last, but not the least, his expert opinion made this a fruitful one. Without his help and cooperation this work could not have been completed.

I also express my great respect and regards to another important person for his careful and kind advice as well as cooperation in getting different valuable records of this university, like annual reports, minutes etc. –the Deputy Registrar- Mr S K Barua. I am really grateful to him for getting my valuable data to make it complete.

I must express my profound regards to my respected teachers and also the Head of the Department of Library and Information Science for their valuable suggestions.

I am also grateful to all members of the Ph. D Committee, all teachers of the Department and all distinguished academicians and others present during my Public Seminar for their valuable suggestions, which have all been incorporated in this thesis.
Along with that, I am also grateful to the librarians of different campuses and departments of this university library, without whose kind cooperation my survey work could not be completed. Even I wish to pay my gratitude to the persons engaged in each and every service section of the Central Library without whose contribution, the data collection and verification of survey could not be fruitful.

I especially want to show my gratitude to the persons involved with Acquisition department of the Central Library for their myriads of help in getting the data on the most important part – budgetary system.

I must also acknowledge the kind cooperation of other university libraries and other libraries too - their librarians and staff, who have helped me and sometimes gave me valuable suggestion in every situation during my survey work as well as consultation of their resources.

Another most important part- without which the total research work would become fruitless- is the statistical data analysis and its graphical representation. Here I wish to owe my heartiest gratitude to the statisticians of ISI for their careful guidance and meticulous planning in preparing the data analysis.

Last, but not the least, I must express my great respect and gratitude to my loving family who always give me constant cooperation as well as inspiration to continue and complete the work.

April, 2010

Anita Basak

Kolkata