ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I was introduced to the issue of ethnicity and nationalism when I was an undergraduate student of history in the University of Delhi. As an inquisitive and naive college student, I used to ask innumerable questions from my teachers, about the ongoing conflict in Kashmir and Chechnya. Unable to understand why people kill each other in the name of religion, territory and language, it was clear to me that in order to comprehend these conflicts and their resolution it is necessary to understand the critical issues of ethnicity and conflicts. As this idea grew further, it conditioned my academic endeavours leading to the thesis of this magnitude.

Delighted at having finished this thesis, I must acknowledge the contribution of my teachers, friends and family members without whose support, encouragement and patience this thesis would not have seen the light of the day. The first and foremost is my supervisor, Prof. Anuradha M. Chenoy, whose tremendous knowledge and uncompromising standards made me learn a lot and produce the best out of me. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to her for showing me a direction in life and being a constant source of inspiration and motivation. I wish I had longer academic association with her. Thank you Mam.

I am indebted to the teachers of my centre: Prof. Shasikant Jha, Prof. Shams-uddin, Prof. Ajay Patnayak, Dr. Gulshan Sachdeva, Prof. R. R. Sharma, Prof. Vijai Kapoor, Prof. Kaushik, Prof. Nirmala Joshi, Dr. Sanjay Pandey, Dr. Tulsiram, Dr. Tahir Ashgar, Dr. Phool Badan and Dr. Bhaswati Sarkar for showing confidence in me and extending a very helping hand. I am especially thankful to Prof. Shasikant Jha, Dr. Sanjay Pandey and Prof. Nirmala Joshi for their willingness to spare some time and discuss various issues of relevance with me. In the category of my teachers, I must mention Mr. Paul D'Souza who taught me various quantitative techniques of analysing data and thus, helped me produce chapter 4.

I would like to thank my School of International Studies, JNU for granting me a field trip to Russia. In the same league falls the Moscow State University and its Institute of Oriental Studies which provided me logistics and helped me collect the primary data for my research. My special thanks to Prof. Luidmila and Dr. Tatiyana for their support. Prof. Luidmila gave me a chance to teach in the classes of B.A. in Moscow and conduct interviews with them. I am grateful to Aunt Maria and Linda who made my field trip a wonderful experience.

I am deeply thankful to my colleagues and friends: Gaurav, Shiv Kumar Verma, Amresh, Amit, Sunny, Satish, Vibhanshu, Piush, Venkat, Bappaditya, Andaleeb, Deepak, Nalin, Biju, Aurobindo, Yamini, Bimlendu, Shalini, Jeeven, Kanhaiya, Raman, Nandita, Richa, Bala, Kailash, Kanchan, Santosh, Vimal Anand and others who stood by me during the five years of my research.

Last but not the least, I take pleasure in acknowledging my Papa, Mummy, Rajeev (brother) and Kum-kum (sister) for their support, endurance and motivation throughout.

Finally, this thesis is, of course, my responsibility and I take the onus for any error or omission in this work.

Rajan Kumar

JNU, New Delhi
28, July 2004