During the course of this study, I have received encouragement, help, inspiration from several personalities without whom, I am sure, this work would not have completed. Let me take this opportunity to acknowledge their direct/indirect contribution to shape and finalize my idea of this project. At the outset, I am extremely thankful to my supervisor, Prof. Avijit Pathak whose inspiration always keeps sustain my study from its inception, albeit, I well knew that, he was undergoing recourse in his own life-project busy. His critical insights, obviously, reflected in the philosophy of sociological imagination inspired me to comfortably follow my research enquiry. From the beginning of my research, his constant engagements, for instance, his constant guidance for the progress of study, suggestions, critical questions and above all motivation shaped and sharpened my methodology of research gradually. I was inspired by and invited to study movement scholarship was largely due to the scholarship of Prof. T.K Oommen. My interaction with him in different occasions; in the form of dialogue with him and a set of text written by him, ingrained confidence in me to go ahead with this sort of project. I wish to thank chairperson of the centre, Prof. Susan Visvanathan and dean of School of Social Sciences, Prof. Nandu Ram, apart from their busy academic schedule, for facilitating technical arrangements to finish my work. I have received encouragement from my teachers in the centre particularly, Dr. Vivek Kumar my M.Phil supervisor and collogue in the later stage. I owe thank to the officer bearers of the centre to extent technical support.

During the project work I could meet and interact with some of the scholars such as Prof. P.N. Mukherji, Prof. Parasuraman, Director, TISS, Mumbai, Prof. Kamal Mitra Chenoy, JNU, New Delhi, Prof. Kunhaman, University of Kerala and Dr. Amita Baviskar, IEG, New Delhi, whose critical engagement with scholarship/movement activism clarify to conceptualize praxis in the movement studies. I am indebted to all of them for sparing their precious time to interact and sharing their thought provoking ideas with me.

Experiential reality of the collective protests I mainly gained from the activists who are in the warfront of collective action during my field visit. As I had been participated protests movements and constructive programs during my school and college days, habit of studying the culture of protest began to crystallize and become much more critical domain at the time of interacting with the activist of Narmada Bachao Andolan like Medha Patkar, Alok Agrawal, Chittaroopa Palit, Pallav and Rajesh; I owe thank to them. I acknowledge sincere gratitude to Ashishbhai, Kishorebhai, and Guruji Surendra Singh for extending hospitality during my stay back in the Badwani and Badal. I memoir the unforgettable moments with Khomurubhai in Badal: with Ajoy from Delhi to Badvani; with Babu and Vipin from Badwani to Kakrana and with Kishorbhai from Kakrana to Badal. While I was participating in the protest in Bhopal and Kandwa I met yet another set of activists like Sangeetha, Pallav, Prem Sagar Kamble and Rajesh. In New Delhi under Delhi social forum, I could interact with activists such as Ashokbhai, Vijayan and Bijulal. I take note of my gratitude to them for sharing their experiences with me.

University of Jammu, where I began my vocation as a teacher, for me, was a critical sight for engaging with young minds and peer groups. To begin with, I am thankful to Prof. Varon Sahni, Hon’ble Vice-Chancellor who is instrumental in facilitating the art of academic culture in my campus. It, obviously, inspired me as a young student-teacher to pursue my further studies. I, rather, began to unlearn and learn in the teaching-machine of sociology department, thankful to my students. My all colleagues in the department, particularly Dr. Ashish Saxena was of great help as and when there was a need for dialogue, entertainment and support. No doubt, I have greatly benefited from Dr. Mathew Joseph, DSRS, with whom my academic interaction took place quite often. He was rather helping me, for instance, sending relevant e-journals, suggesting basic readings, critical comments over my text after careful reading etc. I wish to thank Mr. Manoj Bhatt, Dept. of Economics who helped me to do statistical analysis and Dr. Shyam Narayan Lal, a sensitive historian with whom, my enquiry on subaltern historiography began and his reflections clarified my doubts. I bear in mind concerns of my office staff in the department for extending technical support whenever I was in need of.

I take a note of gratitude to the librarians of JNU, New Delhi, DSA Library in CSSS, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi, Dept. of Sociology, DSRS, Dept. of Political Science, University of Jammu, TISS, Mumbai, Eklavya, Bhopal, CDS, Thiruvananthapuram, KSSP, Thiruvananthapuram, Loyola College of Social Sciences, Thiruvananthapuram.

My classmates in JNU, for instance, Gulam, Faisal, Kabilan, Bibek, have been great source of encouragements in the world of my academic life. Ever since, my parents and brothers, my aunt and yetthathi with their love and affection have been a great strength for my academic pursuits. My well-wishers such as Mr. Stuart, Dr. Antony Palackal, Mr. George VJ and family, and Mr. Victor John have always motivated me to go ahead with my higher studies. I owe thank, once again, to all of them.
