At the outset, I owe an intellectual debt to Prof. Pradeep Apte, my teacher at Fergusson College, Pune, who introduced me to the subject of Organic Farming, and lent me initial support and guidance. My earnest thanks are due to my guide, Dr Sharmishtha Satav, for her constant backing, encouragement, guidance, suggestions, and constructive criticism, throughout this research work.

My thanks are due to the many farmers who contributed their practical experiences, without whom, this research work would have been impossible.

Grateful acknowledgements are due to Mr Diliprao Deshmukh-Baradkar, Vice-President, Maharashtra Organic Farming Federation, Pune, for making a huge amount of information and literature available to me, and for arranging meetings with organic farmers. I am also thankful to Mr P. B. Shitole of Gram Parivartan, for letting me attend the organic farmers’ meet at Khalad and letting me have discussions with the farmers at length; as also the Research and Development Cell of the University Women’s Association, Pune for introducing me to some organic farmers. I also thank the Organic Farming Association of India, Goa, for selecting me to be their Honorary Member, of their own accord, and providing me with their newsletters and updates.

I am grateful to Dr K. N. Dhumal, Department of Botany, University of Pune and Dr B. N. Pawar, College of Agriculture, Kolhapur, for taking the trouble of going through my chapter on experimental work and giving their suggestions, based on their vast theoretical and practical knowledge of agriculture.

I would like to put on record, the help rendered by Deputy Registrar, Mr Nimbalkar and the library staff of the Mahatma Phule Krishi Vidyapeeth, Rahuri. I am also grateful to Principal Sawant of the College of Agriculture, Pune, for letting me use the laboratory and library facilities of the college, Mr Abhay Patil of the Department of Agricultural Chemistry and Soil Science, College of Agriculture, Pune, and Principal S. M. Chitale of Fergusson College, for letting me use the laboratory facility of the college, without which, my experimental work would not have been complete. Mention must also be made of the library staff of the Gokhale Institute of Politics and Economics, Pune for their co-operation throughout this study.
This research work would have remained incomplete without the studying the views of stakeholders, who have a significant role to play in the future status of organic farming. I thank all the different stakeholders, who spent hours of their valuable time in conducting informal discussions with me. Special thanks are due to Dr Vandana Shiva, whom I had the opportunity of meeting, Mr K. N. Bhide, Retired Agricultural Scientist, BAF, Mr Vijay Paranjape, Professor of Economics and Head, NGO Gomukh, Mr Utkarsh Ghatre, Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore, Dr D. P. Yadav, Head, Department of Agricultural Economics, Mahatma Phule Krishi Vidyapeeth, Rahuri, Mr Diliprao Deshmukh-Baradkar, MOFF, Ms Eva Verena Degens, Researcher at the University of Mainz, Germany, Mr Chinmay Lokare, M. S., Horticulture Holland, Ms Kalpana Salunkhe and Mr. P. B. Shitole of Gram Parivartan, Ms Lata Shrikhande, Organic Grower, Ms Sandeepa Kanitkar, Managing Director, Kumar Krishi Mitra Bio-products (P) Ltd, Mr Subhash Powar, BAF Research and Development Foundation, Ms Jyoti Gaikwad and Mr Anil Bhujbal, State Resource Centre, Government of Maharashtra, Dr Ashwini Ghorpade, Trustee, BAF and MOFF, Mr Valke and Mr Deshmukh, Officer-in-charge and Deputy Officer, resp., Government Agricultural Research Centre, Chas, Mr Ravinder Pal, Business Development Manager, Shrestha Natural Bioproducts Pvt. Ltd, Mr Tushar Chivate, Distributor of organic manures, Mr Suhas Sapatnekar, Coordinator, Ecological Society, Pune and Mr Suresh Desai, Member, Karnataka State Organic Farming Committee and Member, Organic Food Club, Yamakanmardi.

Recognition must be given to Ms Manjusha Wadekar for her valuable help in DTP work.

I fondly remember the small little things that my colleagues and friends, Akshay, Yadav, Srividya, and Samadhan did for me during the course of this research, and the encouragement given to me by Dr Ms N. D. Bhalerao, Head, Department of Economics, Fergusson College, Pune.

Finally, my heartfelt thanks are due to my parents, Dr Meera and Arwind Bondre, for their continual help, support, and inspiration, without which, this research would not have been possible.

Kalyani Bondre