

Family Medicine, 31 (1), 17-22.

doctoral dissertation, Vanderbilt University Medical Centre, Tennessee, U. S. A.

Biji, R. V. (2002). Determinants of mental stress in adults with a severe auditory impairment: Differences between pre-lingual and post-lingual deafness. Psychosomatic Medicine, 64, 61-70.

school adolescents with hearing impairments in New Zealand.
American Annals of the Deaf, 143, 268–276.

Furth. (1973). Deafness and learning: A psychosocial approach. USA:
Wadsworth Publishing Company.

Gallinger, Sela, I., & Weisel, A. (1992). The deaf community in Israel. Tel
Aviv: Association of the Deaf in Israel, National Insurance Institute, JDC Israel, and Ministry of Labour and Welfare.

Bombay: Vakils, Feffer, and Simons Ltd.

Gautam, V. (1988). An investigation into the educational and vocational interests of students at the delta stages, and their implications for future curricula. In Fifth survey of educational research (Vol. 2). New Delhi: National Council of Educational Research and Training.

Gay, L. R. (1996). *Educational research competencies for analysis and Geetha, K. (2002). School readiness for children with special needs-hearing impairment. Secunderabad: NIMHANS.

Giangreco, M., Broer, S.M., & Edelman, S. (1999). The tip of the iceberg:
Determining whether paraprofessional support is needed for Michael. et al. (2005). Impact of support service planning on students who are deaf-blind. USA: University of Vermont.

Unpublished doctoral dissertation, University of Manchester, Oxford Road, U. K.

Toth, A. (2000). Improving the delivery of the sign language instruction program for parents of children who are deaf and receiving services from a school for the deaf. Fort Lauderdale, Florida: Nova Southeastern University.

