This dissertation is the outcome of research done under the Faculty Improvement Programme of the University Grants Commission. In this connection, I am particularly indebted to Shri Nabinananda Sen, Reader, Department of Business Management, University of Calcutta, who has supervised my thesis.

Professor Anil Kumar Sarkar of the Department of Business Management initiated me to the world of research ten years back. I am indebted to him for valuable comments on the thesis. I am also indebted to the other members of the Department for their suggestions for the improvement of the thesis at a seminar given by me in April 1992. My teacher, Shri Arabinda Bhattacharya, in his characteristic style, encouraged me in my research work as a friend.

A number of my friends have helped me in diverse ways in course of my research. Kunal Roychoudhury, Tarun Pyne and Dilip Ghosh generously lent me books from their personal collections. Amit Bandyopadhyay has assisted me in preparing the bibliography of my thesis. Asit Sen, Kajal Mukherjee, Mrinal Nath, Pradyumna Bandyopadhyay, Alok Das, Nirmalya Majumdar, Chandika Prasad Ghosal and Amitava Bhattacharya offered me comradely cooperation and had been a constant source of inspiration to my research.

The staff of the National Library had cooperated with me in every possible ways in the process of collection of my research materials. I enjoyed the company and assistance of some other researchers at the Library. They are Pulakesh Roy, Dipak Das, Sanat Bose and Abhijit Chakraborty. I am also grateful to the library staff of the University of Calcutta, Serampore College, Indian Statistical Institute, Indian Institute of Management and Centre for Studies in Social Sciences, Calcutta, for their cooperation. It should be mentioned in this context that Shri Debdas Banerjee and Shri Anjan Ghosh showed scholarly interest in my research during my visits to the Centre.
I am indebted to the Faculty of Serampore College for granting me leave for doing research in connection with this dissertation. I express sincere gratitude to my colleagues and the librarians of Serampore College for their encouragement and cooperation.

In spite of his busy work-schedule, Arun Chandra Das had taken the pain of typing the first draft of my thesis. Ruby Das, who has typed the final draft of the thesis, offered her suggestions for improving the presentation of the thesis aesthetically.

Last but not the least, I am deeply indebted to my parents who took the entire burden of the family and actively cooperated with me during my period of research. Without their sympathy and cooperation, this thesis would never have been written. I also got mental relief in moments of boredom in the company of my elder brothers, Ashok Sen and Dilip Sen, and sisters-in-law, Sumathi Rao and Rakhi Sen. Frequent meetings with Kunal, Himit, Tarun, Amit, Pisi, Didi and Anita gave me fresh energy in my research. My little friends, Payel, Ani and Tutul, brought lust for life throughout my research career.
