IN GRATITUDE

I am most grateful to Professor Vijay Gupta for introducing me to the most fascinating world of African literature, particularly the writings of Ngugi wa Thiong'o. It was after I had read Ngugi's Petals of Blood which Professor Gupta had lent me that I decided to explore the tradition of creative writing in Africa more intensively and formally. I have no hesitation in stating that but for Professor Vijay Gupta's patient persistence this work would never have been completed.

I am also grateful to Mr. Amin Mwani of Kenya, now living in London, who made it possible for me to meet Ngugi wa Thiong'o.

I have also enjoyed interacting with my students in the African literature courses and I acknowledge benefitting from their nascent insights.

I express my heartfelt thanks to Mr. K.K. Raman for preparing the manuscript of the dissertation with such meticulous care and precision.

Finally, -- and most significantly --I am grateful to my wife Vaishna and daughter Shipra for their understanding and 'silent' support to my erratic manner of pursuing academics.
