Acknowledgement

Much of what is contained in this volume has its origin in a series of discussions that I had with my respected teacher Dr. Ratan Khasnabis, Professor, Department of Business Management and Dean, Faculty of Commerce, Social Welfare and Business Management, Calcutta University. I convey my sincere respect and gratitude to him for this and also for his supervision of the present project. I am also grateful to him for giving me continuous inspiration and encouragement in my work without which it would not have been possible for me to complete the work. During the whole period of my work I could consult him at any odd hours and his kind help was always forthcoming.

In order to study the labour process in a transitional economy, I have taken the help of a field survey. I am thankful to the respondents who met all my queries patiently. I should also thank local knowledgeable persons who provided me with some valuable information on the functioning of the weaving sector in Nadia. In writing the thesis I have taken the help of the published literature in the subject. Naturally, I owe an intellectual debt to the numerous authors who have enriched me in the subject.

I am grateful to the librarians and other staff members of the Central Library of Calcutta University, Centre for Studies in Social Sciences and the National Library for providing me necessary books, journals and reports. I express my thanks to Sri Suchikkan Das for managing time to complete the typing as early as possible. For skilful typing, I am also thankful and much indebted to Sri Subhasis Das and Sri Sukanta Mitra of ‘Springtide’.
