Acknowledgement

First and foremost I would like to thank my guide Dr. Kavita Panjabi whose support and guidance has been instrumental in making this work possible. She not only helped me to sharpen my claims but also to put the study into perspective.

Thanks to my parents who have being extremely supportive and have always given me the freedom to pursue my dreams. Their inspiration is indispensable for me.

Thanks to those innumerable interviewees who shared their experiences with me and trusted me with the accounts of their lives. This work would not have been possible without them.

My association with the Centre for the Study of Developing Societies (CSDS), especially Ashis Nandy has been very enriching in terms of the insight and exposure it allowed me. My sincere thanks to them.

Thanks to the School of Women’s Studies for selecting me for the SRTT JU Library Fellowship which helped my work gain momentum.

Thanks to Subaskaku for his words of encouragement. It was a morale booster for me. A special thanks to Ramranjan Dey (Ramda), the ninety six year young, whose enthusiasm and energy was infectious. Thanks to Kaustuv, Bikram, Anirban, Ramya, Rica and Rashmi for being patient with me and giving me all kinds of logistic support. Thanks to Subhadra for relieving me of all the household responsibilities and letting me concentrate full time in my work.
Thanks to Sekhar and Abonti for bearing with me and tolerating all my weird schedules and mood swings. Abonti will be happy that finally my ‘so-much homework’, as she calls it, is over and I will have some time to be with her too.

I started this work at a very difficult phase of my life. I had just given birth to my daughter and soon after was bogged down with a very bad attack of rheumatoid arthritis which made me confined to bed for a considerable period of time. I am glad that in spite of all the difficulties I could pull the work through and bring it to a fruitful end. This I could obviously not have done without the loving support of so many people around me; my friends, my guide, my family and a lot more people. The accounts of the people that I was dealing with in my work and the kind of resilience they had shown at times of adversity also in a way gave me the courage to sail through.

Last but not the least I would like to express my gratitude to the inspiration of one person who I remember a great deal throughout but especially today when the work stands completed—Anjanda. He is physically no more with us today but his loving memory will always be there with some of us who have had the opportunity to know him. I owe him a lot for his encouragement.
