ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This thesis has been completed under the official supervision and able guidance of Professor T.K. Oommen, Centre for the Study of Social Systems, School of Social Sciences, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. I am extremely grateful to Prof. Oommen for his continuous encouragement and for the many inspiring discussions I had the privilege to have with him throughout my work. His constructive comments and well-meaning criticism helped to make substantive improvements in the thesis.

I wish to express my earnest thanks to Prof. A.M. Shah and Dr. (Mrs.) A.A. Minocha of the Department of Sociology, Delhi School of Economics, University of Delhi for their invaluable advice and help given to me from time to time.

Equally obliged I am to all the medical practitioners and the town people of Rajpura, who readily cooperated by responding to my queries patiently. Needless to say, this research would not have been possible without their cooperation.

My special thanks are due to Miss Swatantra K. Sekhon, IAS for all the facilities and discerning help afforded to in the selection of the locales of study.
My warmest and deepest gratitude to Mr. G.P.S. Nambar, Senior Translation Officer, INSDOC (CSIR) and Miss Yogam Ram, Lecturer, Department of Political Science, Maitreyi College, University of Delhi, for their untiring and ungrudging help in editing and proof-reading the manuscript.

I would like to acknowledge Mr. N. Balasubramaniam, for his patient cooperation in typing the manuscript.

I wish to express my thanks to Dr. (Mrs.) S. Srivastava, Principal, Maitreyi College, University of Delhi for granting me leave of absence to enable me to complete the thesis.

I am also indebted to my husband Er. Arun Chopra for his moral support and to a number of people who have helped me in various ways during the course of my research work.

Lastly, I would like to place on record that this study would not have been possible without the Teacher-fellowship granted to me for one year (January 78 to December 78) by the Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi.
