A research work is in essence, a joint exercise in which several subresearch units participate to study and analyse the different dimensions of a given problem and then synthesize it to reach a conclusion based on its findings which may or may not open new areas of thinking and further research. This study too, is no exception and the researcher would like to acknowledge a number of individuals those who have positively and significantly contributed in the research investigation.

First of all I take this opportunity to express my gratitude to my husband Mr. Kaushik Krishna Ghosh, whose constant moral support and appreciation was a source of inspiration throughout. I also sincerely remember and acknowledge my parents, Dr. B.N. Basu and Mrs. Minati Basu’s deepest support to pursue the research work diligently till its completion. Special thanks goes to my younger sister, Ms. Sumita Basu for her mental support and for standing beside me in hours of stress and rendering all possible help.

Certain useful suggestions and comments received from Dr. Ramanath Kundu, Ex. Professor of Psychology, Department of Psychology, Calcutta University.

Further for statistical analysis of the data, I remain grateful to Dr. A.K. Sinha, Research associates, Indian Institute of Management, Calcutta, who provided me the computer facilities at the Institute to enable me to get the data processed and analysed. I also gratefully acknowledge Dr. A.K. Chatterjee, Lecturer of Applied Psychology Department, Calcutta University for statistical analysis of data.

Mention should also be made about the authorities of various Libraries who helped me in consulting the books and journals from their respective libraries. In particular, I am grateful to the USIS library, British Council library, National library, the librarian of
I would also like to proffer my special thanks to my subjects who participated patiently and enthusiastically during the testing and questionnaire sessions to complete the research.

Ms. Ruby Das deserves special thanks for the patience and care with which she typed the drafts and the final copy of this thesis.

Finally I must express deepest gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Nilanjana Sanyal, Reader of the Department of Psychology, Calcutta University who advised me to take up research in this field. Her unstinted cooperation, sincerity and devotion to every step for analysing every outcome from all possible angles with patience and care added depth to this study.
