ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In writing this thesis, I am grateful to many institutions and individuals, who provided the much-needed facility, help, support, encouragement, and guidance at different points of time. Without such inputs and contribution which came almost spontaneously and more significantly, devoid of any sense of quid pro quo this work, perhaps, might not have seen the light of the day.

First and foremost, I would like to thank my guide Dr. Mallikarjun Angadi, Deputy Librarian & Chairperson, Centre for Library & Information Management Studies for the continuous support and dedication. He was ever-ready to clear doubts, offer solutions to specific problems and willing to guide when requested, keeping all his personal engagements at bay. His untiring spirit, understanding nature, and vast experience were great assets to my work on the subject. I must share the credit for my work with him, as without his supervision things would not have been the same.

My special gratitude to my Doctoral Advisory Committee, Dr. B.S. Kademani, BARC and Prof. Anil Sutar, TISS for helping me develop the scales and guiding me all through the analysis and presentation of the research. They were the main guiding force during the exercise without whose cooperation it would not have been possible to complete this research.

Among many institutions, two illustrious ones, the Tata Institute of Social Sciences (TISS) in Mumbai and the International Institute for Population Sciences (IIPS) also in Mumbai mattered most to me in the course of the writing of this thesis. I am extremely lucky that while being in service I got an opportunity to pursue my doctoral program at Centre for Library & Information Management Studies of TISS, a leading institution in India known for research in social sciences. Similarly, I am also fortunate that my employer, the IIPS a premier institution in the world known for demographic studies and research, allowed me to pursue the study while being in the service. For all these, I express my sincere gratitude to both the institutions and their respective heads Prof. S. Parasuraman, the Director and Dr. Faujdar Ram, Director & Senior Professor respectively. I am also indebted to Dr. Muttayya Koganuramath Ex-Librarian, and
Dr. Satish Kanamadi, Librarian, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai and Dr. M.K. Kulkarni, Registrar, IIPS and for their cooperation and help at all the time. I am also very grateful to all the faculty members of Centre for Library and Information Management Studies and Library Staff.

During the entire study period, Dr. Prem C. Saxena, Emeritus Professor of TISS, Mumbai, and Mr. K. B. Gotpagar, Rtd. Faculty of IIPS, who have been encouraged to complete the work successfully without whom I could not have completed this thesis, so I am thankful to them from the bottom of my heart. The eminent personalities in the discipline of Library & Information Science, Dr. H.S. Waydande, Chief Librarian of IIT, Mumbai, who has encouraged completing this task of research work. Thanks are due to my former teacher Dr. J. B. Jadhav, Ex-Librarian of Shivaji University, Kolhapur, Mr. R.T. Randeria, Ex-librarian of International Institute for Population Sciences, Mumbai, who have always been sources of inspiration and confidence. I am thankful to my professional colleagues in the IIPS and the TISS for their cooperation in research. I owe a lot to some of my former teachers of Lib.& Inf. Sc., who have taught me ABC of the library profession, yet their names I cannot mention for the brevity of space. The credit for initiating me to this doctoral program is also going to IIPS faculty members as they would constantly remind me of the benefits of a doctoral degree in academic and administration field.

Last but not the least, all my family members, mother Mrs. Gunavanta Mestri, wife Mangal, son Vivek deserve special thanks for the inconvenience occurred due to my absence. The sisters Sunanda, Vandana, Minakshi, Dipu, and Rupa deserve a special mention here for sacrificing their quality time for my work and undergoing needless inconvenience because of my involvement in research for a long duration. I am beholden to them and just cannot repay them their loss. In the end, I dedicate this work to the memory of my late father.
