ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It is my pleasure to express my sincere gratitude to my doctoral supervisor and mentor Prof. R. Ramakumar. My association with him dating back almost a decade before the commencement of M.Phil - Ph.D programme has inspired me to choose an academic career. His valuable guidance in this long journey has helped me to undertake this research with confidence. His constant encouragement, support and critical comments throughout the study period made this research possible. It is not just academic but I was able to share personal matters with him, which helped me to focus on my research. I am very proud to be his first doctoral student in the institute.

I also want to extend my sincere gratitude to my doctoral advisory committee members: Prof. Venkatesh Athreya and Dr. Aparajita Bakshi. Their critical comments and suggestions on the draft were always insightful and valuable. Especially, Dr. Aparajita, a special thanks to you for the support that you always given for me.

I am obliged to Prof. V.K. Ramachandran and Prof. Madhura Swaminathan for giving me opportunities to attend seminars, conferences and allowing me to share my research work, which helped me broaden my horizon. Through these opportunities I was able to incorporate new dimensions in this research. I want to thank Prof. T. Jayaraman for his support not just in my studies but at a personal level too. I am also thankful to Dr. Pallavi Chavan and Dr. Tejal Kanitkar for their constant encouragement and help.

Sakshi Kapoor, this thesis would be incomplete without your support and encouragement. I still remember a very long discussion we had in Hyderabad on the role of state in education and agriculture. I must mention here that because of you I could improve my personality. I am deeply indebted for the care, sympathy and encouragement that you have always extended. You were the person who was always ready to listen to my frustrations and complaints. I also want to sincerely express my gratitude to a very special person i.e. Priya. There are memories associated with you Priya and I will keep them with me forever. Thank you very much for everything you did for me.

The most important shareholders in my happiness and success are the people of Maskawad, staff of village panchayat and Talathi office. Without their kind support and cooperation this study would not have completed. I also must acknowledge the efforts put in the village survey by the best survey team: Anna, Ajay, Navnath, Hanumat, Rajesh.
Vitthal, Mahaveer, Ganesh, Sandeep and many others who extended their full cooperation during the field work.

I extend my sincere gratitude to the National Centre of Competence Research (NCCR), especially Prof. Ulrike Müller-Böker and Dr. Urs Geiser for the financial support to complete this work.

Tushar, you constantly supported and encouraged me throughout this journey. You were always there to discuss, argue and give critical comments on my work, which helped me in strengthening my ideas. I remember the fun we had during the field work. Our Jay-Veeru Jodi was the best.

The constant support and encouragement received from my all friends and well wishers was most appreciable throughout my PhD journey. I particularly extend my thanks to Vinita, Shweta, Yacoub (very special thanks for editing some of my chapters), Tapas, Bhaskar, Ruchi, Ratheesh, Daksha, Rahul, Bijayashri, Ranjini, Bheem, Baburao, Amit, Ranu, Manoj Josef and Arvind Nair for their constant support both at personal and academic level. I am thankful to Misha and Silva, our long discussion on Indian agriculture was quite useful in this study.

I also extend my gratitude to Susheela Madam, Purnima Madam, Anil Datar Sir, Vidya, Pravin and others from Doctoral Student Office; Jayashri, Jennefer, Zuzubee, Manisha and Atul from International Relation Office; all the staff at Library; and finally all the staff member of Dining Hall for their all.

I am grateful to Prof. Martin Franz from Osnabrück University, for allowing me to present a draft paper based on my thesis. I am also thankful to Prof. Helen Basu, Institute of Ethnology of University of Münster, Germany who appreciated my work and allowed me to share some of my work in the Ph.D colloquium at the institute.

Being the first generation learner in my family, my parents are not even know of what a Ph.D degree is but encouraged and trusted me a lot. I convey my sincere gratitude to them for allowing me to pursue my academic career. I am sure that they are proud of me. Thank you very much…!
