Acknowledgements

Writing acknowledgements is the time to trace the steps one has walked—and I do not hope to ever complete the job. While there are so many people who have been involved with this work, mere is one person to whom it owes its life. It is Prof. Alladi Uma, my supervisor. I have seen both the ups and downs of research, going through the researcher's dejections, so common in so many of us. But she has been with me throughout. I know for a fact that I just could not have completed this project if not for her tireless encouragement and constant support. I have benefited immensely from her meticulous comments. I thank her for being with me and believing in this work.

Dr. Sridhar had taken this project as his own, spent energy and time, participating in discussions from the proposal stage onwards and continuing till this point. Though formally he was not my supervisor, he made me feel so much at home that I felt free to demand his time and ideas. I thank him for helping at the most critical junctures of this work.

I am also grateful for Dr. Sivaprasad who took time to read through the drafts and offer suggestions. They helped me shape the first draft into a dissertation.

I just cannot even attempt to name all the people who have been with me: Abbas, Abhilash, Amit, Anand, Gurram, Mahanand, Aruna, Kankanrao, Kanchan, Keshav, Maithreyi, Ramesh, Sam, Sanjeev, Saroj, Shamsiya, Shashi, Shilpa, Shivali, Shweli, Sovijaya, Sreedhar, Srisri, Sudarshan, Sujata, Suma, Tatya, Thara, Vai and Vijay are just some of them. Beena, Shamla, Sushanth and Viji were with me throughout the submission scramble. I thank all of them.

Jenny and Indira have humbled me many times by shaking my complacencies. In many ways this dissertation owes a lot to these individuals.

I have benefited a lot from people who shared “Kerala” with me. I especially thank Bindulakshmi, Bobby, Deepa Vasudevan, Devika, Dileep Raj, Bindu Menon, Girija, Manju, Murali, Navaneetha, Pramod, Praveena, Ratheesh, Radhakrishnan, Ratheesh, Reshma, Robin, Shalini, Shobhana, Sibi and Sreedevi. V.J. Varghese, who shares a passion for Wayanad with me, read through a chapter and offered crucial suggestions. I am grateful that I knew you all.

I just could not have found my feet in the field if not for the varied help offered by so many individuals and organizations. Uravu team had treated me as their own. I am especially grateful to C.K. Janu, C.M. Yogi, Chandran, Chinnu, Gangadharan, K.J. Baby, Koorie, Lakshmi, Madhavan Mary, Narayanan, O.K. Johnny, Radhakrishnan, Sherly, Sivaraman and Thai. I would also like to acknowledge the Non-governmental organisations which allowed me access to their collections and materials. I thank Solidarity and Fedina.

Many scholars have helped me with material or given a patient ear to my ramblings. I thank Drs. M.G.S. Narayanan, Mjueebuddin, Dilip Menon, Tejaswini Niranjan, Suneetha Rani, Susie Tharu, Nongbri, Raghava Varier, Raghu Ramaraju, Shashie Hegde, Virginii Xaza, Vishwanathan and V. Geetha especially.

The English Department in the University of Hyderabad opened up spaces of research, which I would not have dared to venture otherwise. I wish to express my gratitude towards the Faculty and students of the department. The office staff was one of the brightest spots of the whole department life. I thank all of you for everything.

The staff at the computer centre, University of Hyderabad, Calicut Archives and ASRC have been extremely helpful.

Aruna Bhikshu, Murali, Naresh, Pullarao, Rajesh, Ramam, Shobha and Sudha are almost like my family. I wish to say a special thanks to Padikkal for our many conversations, which has also fed into the dissertation.
Anveshi, Minuguru and the short-lived Hyderabad Women’s Collective have been important in my life. I especially remember with gratitude Bhagya, Chaitu, Jayashree, Jayashree Kalathil, Rekha, Shyamala, Suneetha, Swathy Margaret and Vasudha.

Chitra has been a dose friend and an exacting critic. Her comments have been very important in shaping the thesis. So also were my long phone conversations with Sharada Natarajan.

Rajesh has always been goading me to do my work in his quiet way. Sukhi has shared my depressions, insecurities and fun. I thank both of them.

Thirumal has been putting up with my submission fevers quite stoically. From proof reading to discussions on an everyday basis—this is as much his work as it is mine.

I just do not have enough words to thank Sharmini and Smriti—for being with me so totally in more ways than one. So, I refuse to do the impossible!

My family has been a constant support for me. They have helped me by always encouraging me. I just could not have done this without them. Thank You.
