To my Family and Mentors
‘...if we break up a living organism by isolating its different parts it is only for the sake of ease in analysis and by no means in order to consider them separately. Indeed when we wish to ascribe to a physiological quality its value and true significance we must always refer it to its whole and draw our final conclusions only in relation to the effects in the whole’

- Claude Bernard