A Note of Thanks

This thesis is a result of collective effort. Support, both intellectual and emotional, has flown from many sources to bring it to completion. My family and relatives, especially those from the maternal side, were continuously encouraging me to finish the work. No less support came from the Centre for Political Studies, where many of my teachers helped me with suggestions from time to time: Dr. Niraja Gopal Jayal, Dr. Gurpreet Mahajan, Dr. Dwaipayan Bhattacharya, Dr. Rakesh Gupta, Prof. Aswini Ray, Prof. S. N. Jha, Prof. Kuldeep Mathur and Prof. Imtiaz Ahmad. I was also benefitted from Dr. Geeta Singh, Dr. Vinod Khadria and Prof. S. C. Ghosh. At the time of extreme fatigue, my friend, Dr. Jagpal Singh of IGNOU encouraged me to work hard as the area is quite promising. Gratitude, however, cannot be expressed for my supervisor, Prof. Kiran Saxena, who guided this work right from a shaky start to a confident finish.

While doing the research, I joined the job of a lecturer in Uluberia College. A colleague of mine, Dr. Siddhartha Bhattacharya, asked me not to compromise with the thesis and work extra hard to finish it. The organisation of time was outlined by his departmental and my general colleague, Dr. Debasish Pal. I received cheerful support from all of my colleagues, especially Mr. Sandeep Das and the head of my department, Mrs. Gayatri Sarkar, who sometimes went out of her way to accommodate to my time.
My friends were no less active on this regard: M.A. Arun, Sachin, Madhudidi, Milididi, Shamshi, Sabbir, Amitabh, Sandip, Karna, Irfan, Haraprasad, Seema, Nityanandada, Prithwis are the few names that come to my mind immediately. To collect data from slum schools in Delhi, some translation into Hindi was necessary, and these were managed by our family friend, Kamranda and his family in Kharagpur, along with Kalpane; in Delhi, with friend Vivek, and younger brother-like Sanjeev and Sisir, I had little to worry about. My school teacher and our family friend, Mrs and Mr. Dipak Das, neighbour Mrs. Giri, also rendered useful help.

I am also grateful to the librarians of JNU library, Teen Murti library, NIEPA library, NCERT library in Delhi, and the National Library, SCERT library and WBBSE library in Calcutta. Finally, M/S Sanjay Photostat accepted the challenge to bring out the thesis in little time, and earned my gratitude, which also must go to the people in charge of JNU Computer Centre, particularly Mr. Rajendra Prasad, Vishal, and of course, Dr. Sudhir Kaicker.

When the work just started, my father expired. The news came suddenly in a peaceful evening. If this work really becomes a pleasing experience for those who read it, I shall conclude that I have been able to pay respect to the memory of my father.

Sujay Ghosh