ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

On top of all it is to the various Schools and Seminars on linguistics sponsored by the Deccan College, Poona, and through them to the numerous scholars (Indian, American, and others) under whom I had the opportunity to receive my theoretical and practical training in most of the branches of linguistics, that my deep and heartfelt gratitude naturally goes.

Taking my inspiration from the above for an independent inquiry into a speech akin to Marathi, my mother-tongue, it was with the initial encouragement Mention may be made here to my indebtedness to the standard books and articles on modern linguistics by eminent scholars reference to which (books etc.) can be found in the known bibliographies. It is for this reason of their common knowledge, and for the facts that my studies mostly show the application of the scientific methodology and that no side-studies dealing with some aspect of the structure of the speech of my study are found done earlier, that I have not found the necessity to attach any 'bibliography' to this dissertation.

from and discussion with scholars like Dr. S.M. Katre and Dr. Gordon H. Fairbanks that I fixed up the present one as the topic for my dissertation. My grateful thanks are due to them.

It was characteristic of Dr. M.A. Mehendale even earlier to prepare me mentally for research studies, purely out of a kind interest in my strivings in linguistics then. Later when officially my student-teacher relationship happened to be developed with him, it was for me a period of invaluable training, constructive activity and unmixed joy. I have no adequate words of gratitude for his readiness of help of any sort and at all times, upon which I have drawn freely. I am only sorry that the period has officially come to an end.

It was extremely lucky of me to come in active contact also with other Professors of Linguistics like Dr. H.A. Gleason, Dr. N.C. Kalelkar and Dr. A.M. Chatage, who all along took a keen interest in my studies and offered precious suggestions from time to time. My grateful thanks are due to them.
My friend, Dr. Ashok R. Kelkar, took the trouble of going through a part of my work and offered his valuable observations, for which I am thankful to him.

I am grateful to Dr. S.G. Tulpule of the Poona University for his constant interest and encouragement in my studies.

Shri Sonu Govind Dolkar, Shri Namdev Patil and other residents of Kharapti on whose speech I have worked gave me hearty cooperation in every respect and made my studies possible. My sincere thanks are due to them.

The late M.G. Kale of Roha was the main figure behind my easy access to the nearby village and the people of Kharapti. My long stays and short visits there for the purpose of field work were made an immemorably happy experience by him and his entire family from whom I have derived every required help. While remaining grateful to the whole family, my lingering pain is on account of the sudden death of Shri M.G. Kale on 16.1.1960. My studies and his affectionate, encouraging and forceful personality are a memory of inextricable association.

The authorities of the Deccan College-Post Graduate and Research Institute, Poona 6, and those of the Schools and Seminars in Linguistics arranged by the same institute, granted me every possible material help and encouragement by first awarding me a Research Scholarship in Linguistics and then a Fellowship in Linguistics (Marathi), by arranging for the required stay of my informants in Poona at the Institute, and by allowing me free use of the tape recording machine. For all this, for all the scientific training I received, and for all the unrecorded kindnesses from various corners, my words of gratitude to Dr. B.M. Katre, the Director of the Institute, fall short of expression. The debt is not repayable.

My friend, Shri Hemant V. Kalkar, has done remarkably pleasant of a difficult job of typing a tedious and exacting work like this that demands wholly upon an accurate use of the phonetic symbols and other types of signs. A random look inside these pages will quickly get the reader into the depth of this remark. My warm thanks are due to him for 'everything he did' in bringing this external appearance to the work.
