My sense of respect and gratitude to my supervisor Dr. (Mrs.) Uma Singh whose constant guidance has made this thesis worthy for consideration for Doctoral degree. Despite of her preoccupations she had helped me at every stage of this work with fruitful comments.

I am also indebted to Prof. Bimal Prasad with whom I explored the possibility of this work and helped me in finalising the topic.

I would also show my sense of gratitude to Prof. S.D. Muni, Prof. Kalim Bahadur, Prof. I.N. Mukherjee and Dr. Dawa Norbu who taught me.

I am also indebted to School of International Studies which has sponsored my field trip to England.

I am thankful to the staff of the India Office Library, Public Record Office and British Museum Library where I spent some time of my research in London.

I would like to mention names of Dr. Ian Talbott, David Washbrook, Iftikhar H. Malik and Gowher Rizvi with whom I interacted in England. I am thankful to my friends in London, Oxford and Cambridge who hosted my visit.

I am thankful to the staff of Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, National Archives and above all the Library of Jawaharlal Nehru University which virtually became my home during my research.

I would like to thank Mr. V.S. Murty who helped me with the typing job and Raghu Bhai for the print-outs. It is difficult to mention names of each and every friend in J.N.U. but it was nice experience being with them. I thank all the well-wishers who happened to be around me.
