ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I express my deep sense of gratitude to my Ph.D. Supervisor, Dr. Debnarayan Sarker, Professor and Secretary, Centre for Economic Studies, Presidency College, Kolkata, for his inspiration, valuable comments and regular guidance.

I am also thankful to Dr. Sarmila Banerjee, Department of Economics, University of Calcutta, and Dr. Dipankar Kundu, ISI, Kolkata. Their hearty inspiration, cooperation and valuable suggestions made it possible to complete the work.

I also owe my gratitude to my teachers especially to Late Dr. Sujit Ghosh and Late Dr. Asis Guha who constantly inspired me since the beginning of my Ph.D. work.

The study is based on the field Survey of four districts – Howrah, Hooghly, Nadia and 24 Paraganas (North) - of West Bengal. I would like to thank to the persons interviewed under the area I surveyed, and to various NGOs who have spent a lot of their valuable time. Their willingness to assist made the survey successful. Special thanks must be given to Mr. Indranil Chatterjee, District Development Manager (Nadia), NABARD, who constantly helped me during field survey.

I am also thankful to the authority of library, Centre for Studies in Social Science, Kolkata, without which my research work could not have been completed.

I also express gratitude to the authority and my colleagues of Sivanath Sastri College, Kolkata who have constantly encouraged me for completing research work. I also record my gratitude to Dr. Asis Dasgupta, Presidency College and Dr. Samir Kumar Ghosh, Vidyasagar Evening College who have inspired me greatly to complete the study.

Constant support and encouragement from Supamadi, Deepadi and my friends Nimai, Sanjukta, Subrata and Sandip made me confident of completing my research work.

Moreover, I wish to thank all of my family members, especially to my husband, Debasish and my three-year old daughter, Disha for their patience without which the research work could not have been completed. In this regard, the constant inspiration of my parents and maternal uncles deserves special thanks.

SUDIPTA DE