ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The personal liberty has been the key stone in the arch of the human rights and a boon emanating from the democracy providing humane environment, a must requirement, for all round individual development and transcendental progress, ultimately benefiting the entire mankind and the universe. Even the countries which do not believe in democracy are inclined to consider the values of the human rights and democracy. It is a home of solace and gives a strong sense of safety, security and peace enabling one to undertake any creative activity and to explore the regions which are hardly traversed by human entity. Naturally this has led man to higher and higher achievements.

The present thesis, both in quality and quantity, has been the outcome of continuous encouragement and guidance of my supervisor and guide – Dr. S.P. Sathe, National Fellow (U.G.C.) who infused in me not only the intellectual inspiration through-out the period of study, but also gave me the confidence with which I could complete this work. His clairvoyant personality played the major role to pull me out from anxiety and distress which at times remained overwhelming and overshadowing. He is singularly responsible to make this work possible inspite of heavy odds. Hence my words may fall short to express my indebtedness to him. For every thing that Dr. Sathe has done I am extremely grateful to him.

I owe a great deal to Dr. C.J. Samuel, Head of Department of Law, University of Poona, for his valuable advice, guidance from time to time and encouragement when needed. Without his strong support this work would have remained incomplete.
I am also grateful to Dr. Dinshaw D. Kelawala, Principal, ILS Law College, Pune, who showed keen interest in my work and offered his unfailing advice when needed.

I extend my sincere thanks to Shri D.G. Joshi, Librarian of the Judges' Library of the Bombay High Court, Nagpur Bench for providing me the requisite material including the Law Books and the Journals.

There are yet other people, who have generously given their time and insight, most of whom must remain anonymous, as I promised them such anonymity, but they equally deserve my thanks.

Thirthy Dinshaw Patel.
