ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First, I would like to express my profound thanks to my supervisor, mentor and guardian Prof P K S Pandey, who is assiduous in his commitment to his students and is a model of an intellectual that I desire to be. He guided my work, helped me to organize my ideas, hypotheses, and doubts into an integrated research work, advised me at different stages of its execution and suggested his valuable comments and corrections to the written chapters. I enjoyed our academic discussions as well as warm personal communication that made the process of writing my thesis meaningful.

I would like to thank Prof R S Gupta, for his courses in Sociolinguistics and other areas that made it possible for me to incorporate an in-depth analysis into my sociolinguistic research. I am also grateful to Rawatji, Bhagwati madam, Renu and Karamchandji for their generous help at different stages of my studies.

This work was possible, in part by a fellowship from the University Grants Commission. I acknowledge the financial support provided by the UGC that allowed me to concentrate on my research work.

This thesis could never have been completed without selfless everyday help and emotional support of my parents, sister Chandrakanta, and brother Avdhesh. My silent words of gratitude go to my mother, who in spite of suffering from severe health problems always devoted herself to our education. In all of my endeavours, I am profoundly indebted to my family and friends for the love, encouragement and much needed perspective that they provided during the research work.

I thank Tulsi, who shared my glee and sorrow till the end of our one decade stay in JNU. My gratitude to Hareshda, Sambhu who helped me during data collection and analysis. Special thanks to Harsh for not only showing interest in my work, but also editing the final draft meticulously, and providing necessary encouragement and help. I also thank Raghav, for taking pains at the eleventh hour. In addition, I would like to acknowledge my appreciation to Dr Chandrajeet, Sanjay, Harsh, Cherry, Bidisha, Brajesh, Amar, Satya, Alshamiri, V K Singh, Comrade Amit, Hari, Dr Pancha Bhoi, Byas, Sobin, and many other friends—who helped at different stages of my work.
I must also mention 'meu especiale amigo', Teresa S, who became a friend during my doctoral study. It may have seemed sometimes that she distracted me from my work; however, in fact, it is those sweet little scribbles loaded with meaning, which gave an especially intimate meaning to this work.

My deep gratitude goes to the generous Kumauni respondents of Delhi, who agreed to be interviewed and provided information on this research work. I want to thank all the respondents for their readiness to share their experience, to discuss both the bright and the dreary aspects of their life.

I dedicate this thesis to my mother who has helped me find new ways in life. It is a great pleasure to be able to thank - you all, who deserve my heartfelt gratitude. The limitations of the study are all mine.
